21 Drowned, Texas Deluge Toll of Death Still Mounts

14 Are Missing as Flood Traps Whole Families and Wrecks Train.

Damage to Crops Is Reported Vast

Cattle Perish; Town of Gonzales Inundated by Raging Waters.

By the Associated Press.

San Antonio, Tex., July 1.—Collapsing houses and wrecking a freight train in a 200-mile strip, a south Texas flood caused a mounting death toll listed at 21 tonight. At least 14 persons were missing.

Damage to cotton and corn crops was tremendous, growers reported. Hundreds of cattle perished.

The rise of normally placid streams after two days of heavy rains was so swift that many families were trapped in their homes. The flood damage was severe particularly in the area about San Marcos, between Austin and San Antonio and to the south.

Whole Families Perish.

Men, women and children perished in some cases after clinging as long as they could to the wreckage of houses being swept away. Others were rescued from treetops.

Jack Blackwell, city editor of the Gonzales Inquirer, estimated crop damage alone would mount to more than a million dollars. County Judge Willis W. Ellison, Gonzales County said:

"The damage to farm crops is tremendous. It will run over a million dollars."

Sixteen persons were reported marooned atop buildings and in trees at Gonzales. Motorboats were pressed into service for attempted rescues, but could make no headway in the swift currents.

Victims are Listed.

The dead and missing:

Clarence Warnette, his wife and two children, drowned at Hardy's Bluff near Nixon.

Walter Wiley Teague, 10, Fort Worth, and an unidentified Mexican, drowned when a freight train was wrecked in Plum Creek.

Anton C. Gonzales, his wife, Consuelo, and his baby Eulalio, drowned in Plum Creek.

Ignacio Hernandez and Zabino Hernandez, drowned in Plum Creek.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Haynes and baby Haynes, drowned in Plum Creek.

Monico Valdez, drowned in Plum Creek.

Private Benjamin A. Castro, Mexican Army, drowned at Piedras Negras, across the Rio Grande from Eagle Pass.

Mrs. Jesus Garza and two daughters, drowned in Plum Creek on the E. C. Woods farm 1 mile east of Kyle.

An unidentified child, drowned in Plum Creek.

12 Others Believed Dead.

Two survivors of the train wreck said they believed six others were killed. Six more were believed drowned when the Antonio Gonzales home collapsed and a hunt was continued for two bodies of three children drowned in Plum Creek.

The children were Pedro Gonzales, 5; Italia Gonzales, 3, and Rodrigo Garza, 5.

The locomotive and ten cars of the freight train—a Missouri-Pacific—tumbled through a washed-out trestle.

Nine Mexicans were huddled in the Gonzales' home, a few hundred yards from the train crash, when the house was washed away.

Water poured into the residential sections of Gonzales. It stood a foot deep in the stores.

Immense Tracts Flooded.

The Gaudalupe River flooded thousands of acres of corn and cotton.

The rains varied from 2 to 14 inches.

An airplane tour of the area showed water standing in the fields as far north as Ennis and Corsicana, roughly 50 miles south of Dallas. Tiny figures were visible with boards and chains trying to move stalled automobiles on sodden country roads.

A small creek 10 miles northeast

Rain Is Scarcer Than in '34, Say Experts of U. S.

Weather Bureau Confirms Serious Proportions of Drought.

By Sidney Olson.

The United States Weather Bureau yesterday confirmed reports that the drought is of major importance by emphasizing that "the present urgent need for rain is more widespread than was the case in either 1930 or 1934 at this season."

Other high spots among numerous widely scattered developments on the drought front included:

The AAA, moving on the flexible soil conservation program, modified the provisions applying to the east central and southern regions in an attempt to increase production of food and feed crops in the drought areas.

Secretary Wallace expressed the fear before Northwestern University students that recurrent droughts are changing the weather of the United States, and estimated that 200,000,000 acres have been either destroyed or seriously damaged by "our carelessness" in conservation.

Rains Fall in Corn Belt.

Rains fell at last in the southern part of the corn belt, but missed the sunburned Dakotas.

The near-record drought continued in the spring wheat area, but extraordinarily high temperatures dropped somewhat.

In Chicago, according to the Associated Press, WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins announced plans to put about 25,000 farmers to work immediately on farm-to-market roads, dams and conservation projects in the Dakotas, Montana, Wyoming and Minnesota, where spring wheat is destroyed.

Twenty-one deaths and heavy crop damages were reported in a south Texas cloudburst.

The statement by the Weather Bureau in its weekly bulletin calmly outlined the impending crop disaster's extent if no rain should fall.

Serious Drought Prevails.

The report said:

"Serious drought, for the third time in the last six years, prevails over the principal agricultural sections of the country. The present urgent need for rain is more widespread than was the case in either 1930 or 1934 at this season of the year. In the other cases the situation was not nearly so critical at the end of June, but in both instances the drought was most severe and caused the greatest crop damage during July and August.

"At the present time there is urgent need for rain nearly everywhere from Vermont, New York, the western portions of Pennsylvania, Virginia, North Carolina and the northern parts of the east Gulf States, westward and northwestward to the Rocky Mountains."

The modification of the soil conservation program announced by the AAA yesterday will work this way:

Where the drought or other unfavorable weather has reduced

Workers Charge Intimidation Of Organizer for Steel Union

Committee Headquarters in Pittsburgh Asserts Representative Was 'Molested' in Weirton Area, Ordered to 'Get Out of Town and Stay Out.'

By the United Press.

Pittsburgh, July 1.—Steel workers organizing committee headquarters tonight issued the first charge of active interference in the drive to organize the Nation's 500,000 steel workers, by releasing an affidavit sworn to by Organizer Claude R. Kramer, of Massillon, Ohio, that he had been intimidated.

That charge, coupled with another statement by American Iron & Steel Institute—the industry's representative organization—and a direct appeal to employes of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, again broke the lull in steel's "battle of words" with labor chieftains.

Kramer, a former WPA worker, who resigned his relief job to become an S. W. O. C. organizer, swore that he was ordered out of Hollidays Cove, W. Va., and subsequently from his hotel room at Steubenville, Ohio, last night. Kramer said he had joined C. T. Greenwood, a former president of the Amalgamated Steel Union at Hollidays Cove, near plants of the Weirton Steel Corporation.

He said he was immediately placed in a police car and taken before Mayor C. S. Cattrell. He said he was told to "get out of town and stay out."

Kramer charged further that he went back to his hotel room at Steubenville, where he said he was accosted by eight men.

He said the eight accompanied him to a railroad station and saw him aboard a train for Pittsburgh.

Mayor Cattrell admitted that Kramer was brought before him but insisted he was not arrested. Cattrell said he merely explained to Kramer that "our people were hostile toward outside organizers," and that "there might be trouble."

Appeal Is Made.

Meantime, Benjamin F. Fairless, president of Carnegie-Illinois, made what was considered the first direct appeal by any steel management for its employes "to think it over and decide what is best for them."

"You will decide whether your best interests lie in joining the union . . . or whether you will be loyal to the employes' representation plan," Fairless' statement read.

Carnegie-Illinois' statement was interpreted to mean the company would not oppose the S. W. O. C.'s drive, leaving the decison wholly with its employes.

Another significant development tonight was the release of figures by the American Iron and Steel institute supporting its argument for continuation of employes' representation plan—one of the main issues of the unionization program for better representation of workers in matters of collective bargaining.

The institute claimed 92 per cent of employes in the industry participated in recent elections held under the existing representation system. Elections were held in 30 major steel companies throughout the Nation. The elections resulted in the choice of 1,898 representatives in the various companies to be spokesmen for more than 275,000 workers and to afford them "ample and effective opportunity for collective bargaining * * * and have a voice in regard to conditions under which they labor," according to the institute.

While the eyes of the labor world were centered on the second great attempt by trade unionists to "crack" the steel industry, Federal officials watched closely signs that

5 Dead, 20 Hurt In Bus Tragedy; Toll May Mount

Several Injured Reported in Grave Condition; Youth Called Hero.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Natural Bridge, Va., July 1.—Five persons were dead here tonight, killed almost instantly when a huge bus skidded on a wet pavement, crashed against a rock bank and overturned last midnight, only a few yards from the 215-foot gorge spanned by the famous Natural Bridge of Virginia.

One of the dead was a Washingtonian.

Twenty others of the 33 occupants of the bus were injured. Several of these, physicians said tonight, were in serious condition in nearby hospitals.

J. J. Olderson, driver of the bus, died heroically as he made a desperate effort to halt the skidding bus and prevent it from plunging into the chasm.

As though misfortune had planned some final touch of irony, the shattered bus, burying its dead beneath its twisted frame, stopped with wheels in air against a huge sign advertising the bridge as one of the scenic wonders of the world.

The metal top caved in, crushing Olderson and four others who, a few minutes before, had been carefree passengers in the front end of the bus.

Other dead beside Olderson are:

John Keese, 29, of 1495 Newton street northwest, a carpenter, who leaves a young widow. He recently had been employed at Grattan, Va., and was returnig to Washington.

J. P. Hamilton, of Birmingham, Ala., a driver for the Southeastern Greyhound Lines, was en route as a passenger to Philadelphia to get a new bus.

Lolita Oldren, of Goodview, Va.

Mrs. William Boyles, of Chattanooga, Tenn.

Dr. E. P. Tompkins, Rockbridge County coroner, said last night an inquest may "not be necessary."

If held, he added, it will be deferred for the time being.

The bus, operated by the Atlantic Greyhound Lines, was rounding a

Police and Politicians Wary With Zioncheck Near Capital

By the Associated Press.

Seattle, July 1.—Police and politicians, each in his own way, tonight shaped a homecoming for Seattle's Representative, Marion A. Zioncheck. A friend of the family reported the Representative's elderly mother had collapsed.

Police expressed the hope that Zioncheck would make good on his Minneapolis promise to be "a model boy."

Political circles, particularly the growing list of aspirants to Zioncheck's seat in Congress, wondered what effect his arrival on Friday would have on the election campaign this fall

When Zioncheck, aboard a Seattle-bound train, promised he was going to be a "model boy," he also asserted that "things are going to start popping" with the opening of the political campaign.

The number of persons seeking the nomination as Representative from his district has increased to 17, including one woman.

The elderly Mrs. Frances Zioncheck, weakened by a recent illness, collapsed on the front porch of her home yestedray on hearing news of her son's latest activities, a friend of the family said. She was taken to a hospital.

The young legislator, aboard the Milwaukee Railroad's Olympian, which left Chicago at 12:15 a. m., was traveling through the Dakotas today.

Before leaving Chicago, he sent a

3 Big Powers Back League In New Attack

Britain, France, Soviet Move in Threats of Withdrawals.

8 Italian Reporters Are Sent Home by Swiss Government.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, July 1.—Three of the world's greatest powers rallied in support of a Fascist-shelled League of Nations structure tonight in the face of veiled hints of withdrawals of smaller nations.

The three were Great Britain, France and Soviet Russia. Spokesmen for the first two said their governments would not recognize Italy's annexation of Ethiopia and all voiced continued faith in the League's future.

These expressions of hope alternated with notes of bitter disillusionment as the statesmen surveyed the wreckage of their attempt to save Ethiopia from what they branded as aggression.

Eight Italian newspapermen, arrested for "creating a scandal" by heckling and cursing Emperor Haile Selassie when he addressed the Assembly yesterday, were released from jail and immediately expelled from Switzerland.

(Italy, standing behind the newspapermen, ordered its minister to Switzerland to protest the arrests. The action of the eight was hailed in Italy as a gesture of patriotism.)

Developments Outlined.

A day filled with oratory—to be continued tomorrow—saw these developments:

1. Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden of Great Britain advised the Assembly not to recognize Italy's conquest; to drop sanctions, and called for the continuance of mutual assistance pacts in the Mediterranean.

2. Premier Leon Blum of France intimated he would oppose recognition of the new empire and expressed faith in the future.

3. Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff of Soviet Russia, the most optimistic orator, urged reform of the League, asserting it "made a tremendous step forward when the overwhelming majority of its members came to the assistance—even if unsuccessfully—of their fellow member when he was attacked."

4. The Union of South Africa, through Charles Te Water, denounced the collapse of sanctions, asserting it would shatter the League, international confidence and hopes of making world peace effective.

5. Foreign ministers of Denmark, Finland, Norway, Sweden, the Netherlands, Spain and Switzerland adopted a resolution asserting "the worsening international situation and cases in which there has been resort to force in recent years" created doubt in these countries whether the conditions in which they assumed obligations under the Covenant still exist to a satisfactory degree."

6. Panama warned the Assembly of "a strong current of opinion favoring the withdrawal of all Latin American states."

7. Canada, through Vicent Massey, announced "there is no alternative but for Canada to support the discontinuance of sanctions."

Eden, asserting sanctions had failed, said "only military action could succeed" in amending the situation and this "could not be considered as a possibility."

He promised France full cooperation "in rebuilding a league of authority." The British foreign secretary suggested the question of League reform should be taken up by the September session.

He also disclosed conversations on Germany's denunciation of the Locarno Treaty, with or without Italy, probably would be held in Brussels July 20. By that time Germany is expected to have replied to a British questionnaire on her substitute Locarno proposals.

Meeting Set September 20.

The annual meeting of the Assembly will be held September 20, when it expects to receive the report of a special committee concerning reform of the Covenant.

Litvinoff spoke of "preparations elsewhere for aggression on a much larger scale" as alarming Europe and mentioned "the actions and statements of one European state, whose aggressive intentions leave no room for doubt concerning its preparations for aggression in more than one direction."

This was generally interpreted as a reference to Germany.

The South African delegate, Te Water, showed deep emotion as he

$33,750,000,000 Debt Shatters All Records, Morgenthau Reports

Hamilton Upbraids Democrats For 'Mumbo-Jumbo' Convention

Pictures Foes as Taken by Surprise by Result of G. O. P. Parley.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Columbus, Ohio, July 1.—Describing the Democratic convention in Philadelphia as filled with "mumbo-jumbo," John Hamilton, national Republican chairman, tonight upheld the Republican platform for "its realistic dealing with specific problems" as against "the attempts at justification" in "Mr. Roosevelt's peronal document."

Hamilton, addressing the Ohio Republican convention, pictured President Roosevelt and his advisers as taken by surprise by the Republican convention results, and added:

"And the intemperate language of their subsequent statements and speeches has given proof of their alarm."

He said:

"There was no high-powered fantasy, no elaborate build-up, no artificial theatrics about the Cleveland convention. When men gather in high seriousness determined to reaffirm the principles of representative government in a nation in which these principles have for 3½ years been flouted and betrayed, no mumbo-jumbo such as this is needed."

Calls Farley Cynical.

Describing Postmaster General James A. Farley as "practical in his politics and cynical in his statesmanship," Hamilton said Farley "is still looking for some sinister force, which he can understand, as the unifying factor at Cleveland."

Hamilton hailed the Republican platform as a statement of American doctrine."

He said:

"The platform is of common authorship. It lacks, therefore, tricks of eloquence. It does not use language to obscure thought . . . It is direct and specific."

The generalissimo of the Landon forces then switched his attack to the Roosevelt Administration's performance as against promise. He asserted that "the initiation of each costly New Deal experiment, the birth of every expensive white rabbit, have meant just this—that every worker must re-assess the value of his pay envelope and the budget of his family."

In a direct comparison of the platforms, he stated:

"The platform written and adopted at Cleveland aimed at solving the problems that confront the Nation. The platform written in Washington and adopted at Philadelphia seeks chiefly to hypnotize the voters into returning a particular political individual and his clique to power."

In the latter part of his address,

Optimism Voiced By Treasury Chief

National Income Rising, U. S. Spending Wanes, He Declares in Talk.

By Robert C. Albright.

Dealing in figures that smashed all other peace-time public debt, operating deficit and spending records, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., reported to the Nation on the state of the public cash box last night, as the Treasury time clock ticked into another fiscal year.

He reported a year's spending record of $8,500,000,000, excluding debt retirement. He reported an excess of expenditures over receipts of $4,400,000,000. And he reported the gross public debt at a new high total of $33,750,000,000, compared with $28,700,000,892,624 a year ago.

He spoke over the radio to the people of the United States as "stockholders" in the "business enterprise" that he said is the United States Government, and derived "real encouragement and satisfaction" from the following observation:

"National income is rising; as a result Federal revenue is increasing; Federal expenditures are on the decline, and the Nation's business is continuing to show steady improvement."

Aside from Bonus Payment.

Morgenthau offered no supporting figures to show the decrease in Federal spending other than to say it was "aside from the payment to the veterans." He said that three items—cash on hand, stabilization fund, and recoverable loans—"provide an offset of 5 and three-quarters billion dollars to the 33 and three-quarters billion dollar public debt."

The Treasury Secretary attributed the Administration's failure to live within the estimates prepared in the fall of 1934 to what he called two "unforeseen and extraordinary events"—the same two events which the President said prompted him to send a new tax bill to Congress.

As outlined by Morgenthau last night, they were:

"1. The prospective revenues were cut down as a result of the decision of the Supreme Court that the agricultural adjustment act was unconstitutional. This meant a loss to the Treasury, in 1936, of nearly half a billion dollars.

"2. Prospective expenditures were increased by an act of Congress directing the immediate payment of the veterans' adjusted service certificates. To provide for the payment of these certificates which, under their original terms were not due until 1945, the expenditure program for 1936 was increased by $1,700,000,000."

Warning Issued by McCarl.

Only a few hours before Morgenthau took to the air to report on the Nation's finances, John Raymond McCarl, in his farewell message as Comptroller General to General Accounting Office employes, had urged them to combat "powerful and resourceful" forces, which he said appear now to be seeking "broader administrative discretion and wider latitude in the spending of public moneys."

McCarl had predicted the time would come when Congrss would resist these "forces" and "resume control and direction of the uses of public moneys." As chairman of a special Senate retrenchment committee, Senator Harry Flood Byrd, of Virginia, had echoed the hope "that the public sentiment in 1937 will compel a drastic reduction of public spending." Byrd had welcomed McCarl's aid in the task, and flooded Federal agencies with factual questionnaires in preparation.

Analyzing the spending record of the Seventy-fourth Congress, second session, another peace-time peak, Chairman James P. Buchanan, of the House appropriations committee, had computed the total at $10,338,000,000, all of which, however, will not be spent in this fiscal year.

After detailing the New Deal's 1936 fiscal year record, in a 1,600-word speech, Morgenthau hailed as an "outstanding development," in connection with the Government's financing over the last three-year period, "the fact that we have reduced the average rate of interest nearly one-fourth" at an annual saving of more than $260,000,000.

Morgenthau claimed that the Gov-

U. S. to Finish New Buildings Here in 2 Years

Plans for Six Remaining Projects, at $16,193,000 Cost, Under Way.

The great Federal building program in Washintgon will be completed in two years, it was learned yesterday.

Plans to complete six remaining projects, which will cost $16,193,000, are under way.

The six projects are:

The Apex Building and annex and a warehouse for the Government Printing Office, an addition to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, the "Great Plaza" and the Public Health Service center at Bethesda, Md.

Architectural plans for the Apex Building have been completed by the procurement division of the Treasury. Bids will be opened in September. This building will complete the "Triangle." It will be built at the intersection of Pennsylvania and Constitution avenues.

The Apex Building will follow the same architectural style of the other buildings of the Triangle—Commerce, Labor, Interstate Commerce, Archives, etc.—and will cost $3,000,000.

The G. P. O. warehouse and annex plans have been completed. The warehouse will be built first. Their cost will be $5,000,000.

The contract for the Bureau of Engraving and Printing addition has been let. It will cost approximately $6,325,000.

The "Great Plaza" is the area now occupied by a parking lot concession behind the District Building. Its improvement is to cost $500,000.

The laboratory at Bethesda will require an expenditure of $1,368,000.

To complete the triangle, which has cost more than $80,000,000, the old Postoffice Department will be demolished.

McCarl Urges Staff to Resist Loose Spending

Comptroller General Quits Post With New Slap at Extravagance.

Calling upon the General Accounting office to combat "powerful and resourceful" forces seeking "broader administrative discretion and wider latitude in the spending of public moneys," John Raymond McCarl, retiring comptroller general, yesterday took formal leave of his staff.

It was the former comptroller general's second slap at "loose" New Deal spending policies in two days. He predicted a time will come "that a Congrss will determine to resist such importunings and resume control and direction of the uses of public money."

Senator Harry Flood Byrd, of Virginia, whose special Senate committee is collaborating with Brookings Institution in a study of Federal spending, meanwhile forecast that the next Congress will be in a position to take this corrective step.

Dispatching fact-finding questionnaires to heads of executive departments and independent agencies, as a foundation step in devising a plan for co-ordination, simplification and general retrenchment in activities of Government, Byrd, who welcomed McCarl's assistance in the task, said:

"I will guarantee that at least the Congress will have full information as to all duplicated efforts and expenditures. I am hopeful that the public sentiment in 1937 will compel a drastic reduction of public spending." Byrd had welcomed McCarl's aid in the task, and flooded Federal agencies with factual questionnaires in preparation.

Analyzing the spending record of the Seventy-fourth Congress, second session, another peace-time peak, Chairman James P. Buchanan, of the House appropriations committee, had computed the total at $10,338,000,000, all of which, however, will not be spent in this fiscal year.

Takoma Park Boy Is Sought In Shooting of Girl Playmate

A 10-year-old boy, sought by police for questioning in the accidental shooting yesterday of Jean Patton, 10, at Takoma Park, Md., had failed to return home early today.

The boy was discovered holding a .22 caliber rifle after the accident, police said. He dropped the gun and ran. Police last night went to his home to question him, but learned from his parents that he failed to come home.

Wounded in the abdomen, Jean was taken to Children's Hospital, where her condition is said to be serious. Police said doctors told them they would be unable to question the girl for several days.

The shooting occurred in a second-floor bedroom at the home of Harry W. Detrich, 10 Valley View avenue. Jean, who lives in Washington, Pa., was visiting her sister in Takoma Park and was invited to play with the Detrich children, Mary Jane, 10; Billy, 12, and a neighbor boy.

The children went to the second-floor room, also used as a playroom, to view the Detrichs' collection of toys. A .22-caliber gun, owned by Billy, was hanging on a wall hook.

While Mary Jane, according to police was in the bathroom, her brother, they said, went downstairs to answer the telephone. A shot rang out and the children rushed into the room. Billy told police the boy who is sought was holding the rifle. The girl was lying on a bed, complaining "something hit me in the stomach."

The boy, Billy said, dropped the gun and ran from the house.

Hindenburg Likely To Set New Record

Albany, N. Y., July 2 (Thursday) (A.P.).—Sailing along at a speed estimated at more than 80 miles an hour, the German dirigible Hindenburg passed over the State capitol here at 12:42 a. m. (daylight time) today en route to Lakehurst, N. J.

As the ship reached the Hudson River at the foot of Capitol Hill it turned in a great circle and headed downstream for New York.

May Cut Time 12 Hours.

Lakehurst, N. J., July 1 (U.P.).—The airship Hindenburg, making its fourth and fastest trip to the United States from Germany, entered the country at Rouses Point, N. Y., shortly after 10:30 (E. D. T.) tonight after a flight down the St. Lawrence River Valley.

This afternoon officers on the German dirigible had messaged that progress was so rapid she might arrive at the Naval Air Station here at midnight, which would have cut some 12 hours from the best westward time of 50 hours 50 minutes.

Flood Control To Be Delayed, President Hints

Congress Should Supply Funds, He Says; Army Engineers Hopeful.

President Roosevelt made it plain yesterday that no projects should be started under the $320,000,000 omnibus flood control bill until Congress appropriates the first $50,000,000 authorized in the bill.

He conferred at length with relief and flood control officials, among them Brig. Gen. George B. Pillsbury, acting chief of Army Engineers; Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes; Federal Reserve Board Member Chester Davis, and H. H. Bennett, of the Soil Conservation program.

Secretary Ickes, as spokesman for the group, said the President is dissatisfied with many of the 217 construction projects authorized in the bill, and proposes further study by the Board of Army Engineers.

Gen. Pillsbury declared that if no money is allotted for actual construction work, the Army Engineers will use the intervening time for further study of projects, although every project in the bill already has their unqualified approval.

"Will Be Ready to Go."

"Much thought can profitably be put on the projects, despite the fact that we have no money at the present time," Gen. Pillsbury said. "Then, when the money does become available, we will be ready to go to work at once."

Neither Secretary Ickes nor Gen. Pillsbury would discuss the possibility of a transfer of relief funds to start flood-control work this year, but the belief persists among the Army Engineers that the President will make such a transfer.

The United States Flood Control Association, which supports early completion of the projects in the omnibus control bill, expressed alarm yesterday over the delay, an Associated Press dispatch from Binghamton, N. Y., said. The association has appealed to President Roosevelt for a hearing before any final determination is made.

Action of the national group came after the President was quoted as saying that although the deficiency relief act included $128,250,000 for flood control and conservation, this money was to be used principally for the soil erosion program.

Potomac Funds Included.

Unless an early allocation of funds is made, flood control projects for the Potomac River valley, and all other projects, will be delayed indefinitely, Army engineers said.

Congress approved a Potomac River program which, when completed, will cost approximately $1,520,800, exclusive of land and damage costs. Levees and grade raisings would be constructed to protect downtown Washington, Arlington Experimental Farm, Bolling Field and Anacostia Naval Station. More flood control projects would be built at Cumberland, West Cumberland, and South Cumberland, Md.; and at Ridgeley, Moorefield and Harpers Ferry W. Va.

President Roosevelt signed the omnibus flood bill only last week. It made no provision for financing projects, but authorized an appropriation of $320,000,000. When the deficiency and relief bill came before the Senate, an amendment appropriating $50,000,000 for flood control was adopted, but the House later rejected and the Administration made no further effort to get a flood control appropriation.

The San Gabriel River, just west of its confluence with the Little River, backed up over thousands of acres of rich farmland. Many bridges were under water.

Five miles west of Lexington a stream so small the map did not show it was a vast, dirty torrent, half a mile wide.

Now and then bodies of dead cattle could be seen where waters had receded.

Near Gonzales, for miles the rich farming country presented the appearance of a huge lake. In some low areas only fence posts marked the boundaries of cultivated fields.

The Guadalupe River stretched 2 miles wide in places.

Twenty miles northeastward two white-faced steers surveyed a marine world from sanctuary on a bridge which once spanned the San Marcos River.

At Kyle, between Austin and San Antonio, where Plum Creek became a roaring torrent and swept many persons to their deaths, the splintered remains of the freight train, which fell through a weakened trestle, had drawn hundreds of curious.

Two bodies were taken from the wreck. Cars were piled on one another, the wooden ones broken and torn, the steel ones rent and twisted. The locomotive lay on its side.

From the trestle's remains could be seen the bare rectangle of gravel where, early last night, stood a Mexican farmhouse and nine occupants. Not a stick remained of the dwelling.

The creek receded as rapidly as it rose.

Throughout the flight one evidence of man's ingenuity in conquering Nature was unmistakable. Fields with contour plowing were rarely harmed. Those with straight rows were washed and ruined.

Voters Plumb Effects of Party Conventions; Political Shifts to Decide Election.

By Franklyn Waltman

As the tumult and shouting of the two national political conventions fade into memory, various efforts have been made to appraise what effect those quadrennial meetings had on the voters of the Nation.

WALTMAN.

The Democratic chieftains profess to find the country greatly impressed by and pleased over the Philadelphia convention. The Republican leaders, on the other hand, think that the Cleveland conclave made votes for their candidate, but that the Philadelphia convention did not change a vote.

It is doubtful whether the proceedings of either convention directly changed a vote in all this land. Idolators of President Roosevelt remain fixed in their worship and they, of course, believe everything that happened at Philadelphia was superb and excellent. The Democratic officials and workers, even when skeptical, remain loyal to him, for they must.

Those who personally liked Gov. Alf M. Landon were pleased over his nomination for the Presidency. Those who are bitterly opposed to President Roosevelt, for one reason or another, did not care particularly whom the Republicans nominated or the nature of their platform. For them the sole issue is President Roosevelt and they want him defeated.

Some of the Republican stalwarts who went to Cleveland favored another candidate for the Presidency, but they came away apparently satisfied with Gov. Landon. So far not a rumor of a bolt has been heard from within the Republican Party because of Gov. Landon's nomination.

But this year's election will not be decided by these two opposing cohorts drawn up on either side. It will be decided by the large mass of voters whose political shifts do not occasion front-page news until the morning after election day. On the whole, they are men and women who neither adore the President nor hate him. In 1932 they assured his overwhelming victory—but four years previously they gave the laurels of victory to Herbert Hoover.

And it is this group which the Republicans must win this year if Gov. Landon is to be victorious. Mr. Roosevelt no more has this group bound to him this year—because he had them in 1932—than Mr. Hoover had them tied to him in 1928. Many of the group at the moment are fence sitters, sorely perplexed by much that has been done in the name of the New Deal. Yet they are suspicious of reaction—if not also blundering stupidity on the part of the Republicans.

Many of these voters were impressed by the nomination of Gov. Landon at Cleveland. They are impressed by the quiet sincerity of the man. But they wish to know more about him and his close friends—they wish to watch him in this campaign before they make up their minds. They are sour on the New Deal—but they are not yet ready to oppose it. Yet their attitude makes the outcome of this year's election doubtful for the present.

As far as helping these men and women to make up their minds in this Presidential contest, the Cleveland and Philadelphia conventions left them cold. And no wonder! There was nothing realistic about either meeting. No effort was made at either place to debate seriously the issues confronting this country.

Instead of platforms which throughout stood for something, formulated from the clash of ideas and an honest and intelligent effort to propose that which is best for the country—debated in the open—there came from the Cleveland conclave a wishy-washy, contradictory document written in a hotel room by a small group dominated by the "Old Guard" and from the Philadelphia convention there came a vague, ambiguous document written by a small group in Washington dominated by Mr. Roosevelt.

The aim of the convention managers at both Philadelphia and Cleveland was the same—to smother debate, to prevent any open discussion and for the purpose of getting votes to sidestep the real issues, all in the name of achieving harmony.

Even worse at both conventions were the speeches. Those at Cleveland denied to President Roosevelt any achievement whatever; imputed to him traitorous desires to overthrow the Constitution and the Republic and painted him as a villain seeking to enslave his fellow countrymen. Those at Philadelphia laid a Messianic halo on his head, attributed to him every virtue, omitted all reference to his mistakes and shortcomings and blamed the three preceding Republican Administrations for every difficulty confronting the country.

It is inconceivable that men sufficiently astute to be party leaders believe that they are serving their respective causes through the outpouring of such oratory. It is incredible that members of the Senate have so low an opinion of the intelligence of the average man that they expect him to swallow some of the guff howled from the rostrums at Cleveland and Philadelphia.

And it is asinine and stupid for anyone to believe that the votes of any except the moronic and feeble-minded could be changed in this manner. If recent indications are to be believed, this country is tired of emotional pleas, of ballyhoo couched in military language and of discourses that outrage the fundamentals set forth in any elementary textbook on economics.

As Raymond Moley, erstwhile No. 1 member of the Roosevelt brain trust, said yesterday:

"People are tired of battle. They were weary of war in 1866 and in 1919, and to escape they plunged into the illusion of political reaction. They are getting tired now of war as a figure of speech.

"I think we have had too much tearing of passions to tatters. It seems to me that this is a time when the argument spoken in a soft voice is going to prevail with the people of this country."

Labor Act Suit Not Fair Test, NLRB Holds

Arkansas Firm Appeals to Supreme Court to Enjoin Hearings.

By the Associated Press.

An attack on the constitutionality of the Wagner labor act reached the Supreme Court for the first time yesterday and immediately brought from National Labor Relations Board officials a contention it would not permit a "fair test."

The challenge was made by the Bradley Lumber Co., of Warren, Ark., in a suit, appealed from the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, seeking to enjoin the board from holding hearings in connection with a strike in the firm's plant last August.

Labor board officials, declining to be quoted by name, said the suit did not challenge the law "on its merits" and that a decision of the validity of the act probably would be sought from the Supreme Court in other cases in October.

The lumber firm and its affiliated sales company contended that the Wagner act, seeking to guarantee collective bargaining rights to workers, destroyed freedom of contract.

Denies Interstate Trade.

The company also claimed that it was engaged in purely intrastate business and that the Federal Government had no right to regulate its relations with its employes.

Judge Wayne G. Borah, of the Federal Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana, denied the firm an injunction and his ruling was upheld by the appellate court.

Injunctions have been denied by Federal district courts in 43 similar cases and granted in 16.

The Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals Tuesday set aside an order issued by the labor board to the Fruehauf Trailer Co., of Detroit, and held that Congress had no right to regulate the labor relations of the manufacturing firm unless they directly affected interstate commerce.

Fifth Circuit Decision.

A similar decision recently was handed down by the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation case.

Labor board spokesmen indicated that it was in one of these cases that the Supreme Court might be asked, for a test decision rather than in the Bradley suit.

In its appeal yesterday, the lumber company contended that the Wagner act was "a substantial reenactment of section 7A of the national industrial recovery act" which the Supreme Court held unconstitutional.

The law also is "strikingly similar" to the labor provisions of the invalidated Guffey coal act, the company added.

Government Calls 1935 Corn Loans

By the Associated Press.

The Government in effect "called" its outstanding 1935 corn loans today.

Thousands of farmer-borrowers who have not already done so must either sell their sealed up grain at current market prices in coming weeks or repay from their own pockets the money lent them at 5 per cent interest.

This reverse picture of the Government-to-farm flow of money was drawn when the Commodity Credit Corporation made known that corn loans expiring on July 1, for the most part, would not be extended.

Loans on corn sealed in cribs were made between December 1, 1935, and March 31, 1936, maturing on July 1, 1936 at 4 per cent interest. Farmers borrowed 45 cents a bushel and at the peak the loans totalled approximately $14,000,000 on about 31,000,000 bushels.

Veteran Adopts Boys To Spend His Bonus

Lorain, Ohio, July 1 (AP).—War Veteran Joseph Matolich and his wife had something to show today for his bonus money—three boys, two of them 11-year-old twins and another two years older.

Childless themselves, the Matolichs went to the County Children's Home when his $1,346 bonus check arrived, and selected the three orphans for adoption.

"My bonus is going to be well spent," Matolich declared. "I'm going to give these kids a good home and send them to school."

poured the hot lead of disdain on the great powers who "are about to declare their powerlessness to protect the weakest in their midst from destruction."

Citing the "lofty protestations" of Britain and France in October, he asked: "Is it to be presumed that phrases of statesmen are meaningless when tested by time and trial? Where are the great powers leading us, powers who have not the faith to persevere?"

Disparingly, he exclaimed: "The Covenant is falling to pieces in our hands!"

Italy Defends Writers.

Rome, July 1 (AP).—Official Italy stood solidly tonight behind the Fascist newsmen who hissed Haile Selassie.

The Italian minister at Berne, Switzerland, was ordered to protest the arrests of the eight at the Geneva League of Nations Assembly yesterday.

Congratulatory "salutations" flooded out of Italy, addressed to the arrested men.

Official reaction to the demonstration they staged was that it was "a gesture of spontaneous reaction by a group of patriotic Italians to an offense against Italy — Tafari's speech."

(Italians now refer to the conquered "king of kings" merely as "Signor Tafari.")

Promise to France Attacked.

London, July 1 (AP).—Opposition members leveled a burst of fire upon the government in the House of Lords today for the assurance given France by a cabinet minister, "your frontier is our frontier."

"It would be very difficult to get the people of this country to fight for France under any circumstances," asserted Baron Arnold, Laborite.

Debate on the recent speech in Paris by Alfred Duff Cooper, secretary of war, in which he referred to the mutual Anglo-French frontiers, saw the minister both rapped and defended.

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, widely rumored as planning to resign shortly, remained at his country estate while the House of Lords debated a motion by Baron Rennell, calling attention "to some apparent lack of consistency in utterances of the ministers on foreign affairs."

Study of Issues Urged by Roper To Trade Group

Should Make '36 Campaign One of Discussion, Not Prejudice, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

Chattanooga, Tenn., July 1.—Secretary Roper asked tonight that businessmen assume a viewpoint that "will make this year's Presidential campaign one of discussion and education rather than one of prejudice and vituperation."

Speaking before the Chattanooga Chamber of Commerce, the Commerce Secretary suggested that "business and industry should study carefully at first hand" matters pending in Washington.

"The businessmen of the United States," Roper said, "have a definite responsibility, as well as an opportunity, to make their views known to the Congress and to the Government on every question before the country today. * * *

"In my many years of experience in Washington I have found that one of the difficulties which faces both the businessman and the Government official is the fact that the approach which business frequently uses in making its viewpoint known has not been conducive to constructive action.

"It is often the case that businessmen permit their opinions and interests to be presented to the Government through representatives who do not know thoroughly the problems of the business organization which they are supposed to represent."

Roper replied to what he said were complaints that Congress "has been a 'rubber stamp' to executive desires." He argued:

"Due to the emergency conditions of the past three and one-half years, it was necessary for the President and Congress to work in very close co-operation."

Suydam Is Ousted By Clause in Bill

By the Associated Press.

Justice Department officials said yesterday that Henry Suydam, publicity adviser to Attorney General Cummings, is out of his job—temporarily at least—as a result of a clause inserted in this department's appropriation bill.

The measure, effective today, provided no one can serve as a special assistant to the attorney general who is not a member of the bar. Suydam held his $10,000 a year position under that title.

Officials said they believed he is the only Justice Department officer affected by the provision, which was inserted by Congress in the appropriation act without knowledge of the department.

Friends of Attorney General Cummings said he hoped to retain Suydam in some capacity not affected by the bill.

Suydam, former war correspondent and Washington representative of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, served as press representative of the State Department under Charles Evans Hughes.

Foes' Platform 'Contradictory' Says Wallace

Its 'Half-Promises' Laid to Ultra-Conservatives' Influence.

By the Associated Press.

Des Moines, Iowa, July 1.—Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, criticized the Republican farm plank as contradictory, and lauded the Democratic as "clear and explicit" in a letter made public here today.

The letter, written in response to an inquiry by Robert M. Clark, Mitchellville, Iowa, apple grower, said the "contradictions, paradoxes and half promises in the (Republican) farm plank must be due to the strong influence still wielded by powerful ultra-conservative forces."

"Viewed in the light of what the Roosevelt Administration has already done," Wallace said, "the Democratic farm plank is clear and explicit."

Rakes Foes on Five Points.

Wallace raked the Republican plank on five points, prefacing his analysis with the assertion that "first of all the two platforms must be studied not only in the light of what they promise the farmers, but also in the light of what the two parties have actually done to help farmers solve the problems confronting them in the critical period since the World War."

Of the Republican plank, he said: "Stripped of its essentials, the Republican farm plank makes conflicting commitments to Eastern capital and Western agriculture.

"By its reference to the restrictive and coercive AAA' it denounces the principle of production adjustment. The monopolistic industrial groups which are back of the (American) Liberty League were eager that it should, despite the fact that they have exercised and still do exercise rigid control over their own production.

Warns of Bankruptcy.

"For the West, however, the farm plank urges policies to bring about an adjustment of agriculture to meet the needs of domestic and foreign markets. Every farmer knows that attaining such adjustments without any adjustment programs merely means forcing farmers out of production by bankruptcy due to low prices.

"The Republican promises on the tariff are just as contradictory as those on production adjustment For the rock-ribbed protectionists of the East, they contain the plain implication that agriculture is again to be used as their tariff catspaw.

"The farm plank promises the exclusion of imports 'of all livestock, dairy and agricultural products, substitutes therefor and derivations therefrom * * *'"

"Would Mean Destruction."

"And as if to clinch a policy of tariff exclusionism the Republican platform promises repeal of the reciprocal trade agreement act. The return of an unreasonable tariff would certainly mean destruction of Western and Southern agriculture, which depend upon exports and upon domestic buying power which is so closely related to international trade."

Of the Democratic platform, Wallace said, "a good many people will disagree * * * but they at least know what the Administration stands for * * *

"Production adjustment within Federal authority to support farm prices, commodity loans, soil conservation, aid to co-operatives, rural electrification, credit at low interest rates, and other activities which must be part of a well-rounded national program for agriculture have been actually carried on by this Administration."

Ex-Film Actress' Trysts Revealed

Miami, Fla., July 1 (AP).—Three employes of the fashionable Deauville Hotel today testified they and others of the staff often witnessed trysts between Kathryn Crawford Edgar, of New York, and Lewis E. Mallory 3d, wealthy young Bradford (Pa.) oil man.

John Edgar, jr., of Detroit, former husband of the one-tme film actress is suing Mallory for $300,000 charging seduction and alienation of her affections.

A bell captain, a steward and a watchman testified they watched Mrs. Edgar and Mallory in the latter's ground floor room with the shades of six windows up and the lights on several times last March. The Edgars were divorced in Detroit last Friday and she resumed the name of Crawford.

Mrs. Edgar told the jury of six married men Edgar suggested "Why don't you have an affair" with Mallory. She said her former husband "raved and stormed" for the last 18 months of their married life, often daring her to leave him.

Nervously clinching the arms of the witness chair and brushing away occasional tears, Mrs. Edgar said she retorted: "Well, I will" to the suggestion of an "affair." She said she sent Mallory a telegram, drafting it in her husband's presence. The telegram, which Mrs. Edgar identified, read:

"Nothing worth while without you, my dear. I love you with every fiber of my soul and will pray every day you are away that you will come back free of heart and mind. Such is my love for you. Kathryn."

Drought

food and feed crop production below normal, farmers may plant all the acreage necessary of those crops to bring production up to normal, without affecting their soil subsidy payments.

County committes will determine the areas in which production is below normal.

Resettlement Administration officials in Washington and at the field stations struggled yesterday with the problem of giving farmers work on resettlement projects, although present funds are low. They sought funds for feed and seed, to be distributed as direct loans or grants under the RA rehabilitation program.

Hopkins' announcement that the 40,000 farmers expected to be added to the WPA rolls within a week would be paid prevailing wages, brought protests immediately from the Farmers Holiday Association and other independent groups, who charged that farmers in the area working on WPA projects had been forced to exist on from $16 to $18 a month.

Hopkins said these charges were "ridiculous." He joined WPA officials in pointing out that subsistence wages paid relief workers in the region usually are equal to prevailing wages. The WPA officials said wages paid to a relief worker a month totaled:

North Dakota, $48.23; South Dakota, $44.44; Montana, $47.31; Wyomng, $49.20, and Mnnesota, $57.93.

Most projects will be in water conservation and road construction work, which should be finished before the first of November. Hopkins said present drought reports did not seem exaggerated to him.

The drought condition, according to most officials, while serious, is not yet disastrous. Good rains in some areas would bring a bumper corn crop, one of the largest in years. A lack of rain for the next three weeks would be a major calamity to the food crop.

The cattle situation is not nearly as grave as that in 1934, when one of the first Government acts of alleviation was to buy cattle, process them and distribute the meat to needy families. The entire area of the 24 leading agricultural States is "extremely susceptible" to any continuation of the drought, as soil moisture is depleted.

At Northwestern University, Secretary Wallace said threats of a "change" in the weather of the United States, eventually making it an arid land, were not idle talk, but possible. He pointed to the dry spells of 1934 and 1936 and to "otherwise freakish weather" of the past seven years. He said:

"It is conceivable that this problem may be enormously complicated by changes in climate. The great migrations of history to some extent were caused by soil depletion, to some extent by changes in climate, and to some extent by political and social disintegration. If the weather of the United States is really changing, it is essential that we study it as a great national problem.

"Of course, it is premature to say that the weather has definitely changed, but if we have during the next seven years weather as freakish as that which we have had during the past seven years, it may well be that the people of the United States will call on the Federal Government in no unmistakable terms to aid them in making certain profound adjustments."

U. S. Debt at 33.75 Billion

ernment had led the way in this reduction of interest charges, and "the individual business man has been able to follow in the footsteps of his Government in reducing his own interest charges and in refunding the debt of his own business."

In the fiscal year ended June 30, he said, business corporations registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission more than $2,500,000,000 worth of securities for the refunding of indebtedness, with an average reduction in the gross rate of interest of 1¼ per cent. He said this meant a saving to these corporations of more than $30,000,000 in interest charges.

U. S. Revenue Increases.

Morgenthau noted as another "important" development the increase in Federal revenues, which he said was "due in large part to improvement in business and agricultural conditions."

"The actual receipts coming into the Treasury during the year which ended last night aggregated $4,116,000,000," he said. "This is $316,000,000 more than came in during the fiscal year 1935, notwithstanding the loss of $444,000,000 through the elimination of processing taxes. But revenue from other sources increased $760,000,000, a gain of 23 per cent. * * *"

The Treasury Secretary related to his national radio audience how the Administration had mapped its 1936 budget plans nearly two years ago, at which time "it looked as if our revenues would total just under $4,000,000,000 and our expenditures, excluding debt retirement, would amount to almost $8,000,000,000." On this basis, he said, the Treasury would have shown a net deficit for the year of "almost $4,000,000,000."

Expenditures in Excess.

As it turned out, his figures showed, receipts exceeded expectations by more than $116,000,000, and expenditures exceeded estimates by more than $500,000,000. This gave a record excess of expenditures over receipts for the year of $4,400,000,000. If the $1,700,000,000 payment to the veterans had been left out, he said, the year's operating deficit would have been only $2,700,000,000.

Of the year's peak expenditures, Morgenthau pointed out that $3,500,000,000 was for the "ordinary" operations of Government, and approximately $3,300,000,000 for recovery and relief.

He broke down the "ordinary" operating expenditures as follows: "National defense took three-quarters of a billion; annual continuing payments to veterans nearly $800,000,000; interest on the public debt another three-quarters of a billion; agricultural aid one-half billion and the other ordinary operating expenses of the Government $900,000,000."

Recovery and relief spending, he broke down as follows:

"We expended for large permanent public works under the emergency program $800,000,000. Direct relief required just under half a billion. In addition we provided about a billion and a quarter for work relief in the form of smaller public works, most of them of permanent value, and nearly half a billion for CCC camps. Aid to home owners and other miscellaneous expenditures took more than $250,000,000."

To finance this program, Morgenthau said, the Treasury had $1,800,000,000 in cash in its general fund at the beginning of the year. With revenue receipts just over $4,000,000,000, it had to borrow the other $2,500,000,000 it spent.

"As a matter of fact," Morgenthau pointed out, "we borrowed more than $5,000,000,000 net, but we have $2,700,000,000 left in our cash balance to meet the expenditures of coming months including the redemption of the veterans' bonds."

Enumerates "Offset" Items.

The Treasury Secretary enumerated the following items in reaching the $8,750,000,000 he said provided an offset against the $33,750,000,000 public debt:

General fund balance	$2,700,000,000
Stabilization fund	2,000,000,000
Recoverable assets	4,000,000,000

Under the "recoverable asset" item he listed loans to home owners, farmers, railroads, banks and insurance companies and to States and cities.

In listing the public debt and other sums, the Secretary spoke in round numbers. Detailed figures will appear in today's Treasury statement. Yesterday's statement, bearing the date of June 27, gave the gross public debt as $33,841,000,000, and the operating deficit as $4,727,000,000.

Oil Magnate's Will Assailed by Widow

Riverhead, N. Y., July 1 (AP).—Testimony that she once expressed the opinion the will of the late Henry Huddleston Rogers, which she is now contesting, was not actually his will, was given in surrogate's court here today by Pauline V. Rogers, his widow.

The witness, plaintiff in a suit brought in an effort to invalidate a waiver she signed in accepting the provisions of the will of the Standard Oil millionaire, made the admission during cross-examination.

Counsel for Mrs. Millicent Rogers Balcom, the step-daughter of Mrs. Rogers, drew from the witness the statement that she recalled a transatlantic telephone conversation which Millicent Rogers received from her brother, Henry Rogers 3d, who was in Europe at the time.

"Did you discuss with Millicent a threat by Henry to break the will?" the attorney asked.

Henry Rogers was "cut off" in the will with $500,000.

"Naturally," responded Mrs. Rogers.

"Did you say, 'Millicent, this is your father's will, and we must stand together and uphold his wishes?'"

"I never felt it really was my husband's will," was the response.

Topeka Editor Host to Landon On Fishing Trip

Governor, With Daughter, Join in Snow Battle on Mountain.

By the Associated Press.

Estes Park, Colo., July 1.—Gov. Alf M. Landon, fish creel over shoulder, twice crossed the continental divide today—and took part in a friendly snowball battle.

He and his daughter, Peggy Anne, were guests of Arthur J. Carruth, jr., Topeka newspaper editor, on a fishing expedition to Grand Lake.

With Peggy Anne at the wheel of the Landon coupe, the vacationing Republican Presidential nominee, climbed the spectacular Trail Ridge road to Fall River Pass, 11,797 feet above sea level, and well above timber-line, and Milner Pass, 10,759 feet high.

Landon posed smilingly as tourists aimed their cameras along the way but declined requests to make speeches.

Several hundred feet above timberline, Landon and his daughter stopped their car to frolic in snow beds and join others in a snowball fight.

At Topeka, Kans., three members of Gov. Landon's campaign staff planned to leave tonight for Estes Park to join him in conferences on his notification speech.

Traffic Employes Take Cuts in Pay

Thirty-nine employes of the District traffic department suffered a 20 per cent pay cut in the checks they received for the last half of June, it was learned yesterday, because the department ended the fiscal year short. The cut will not be carried into the new fiscal year.

From Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer down the employes each had to take the cut to make up the deficit of $635.

There was a difference of opinion as to who was to blame for the situation. Van Duzer said he informed the auditor's office last February of the shortage, but the auditor's office merely blamed the traffic director for exceeding his appropriation.

Four Hitler Aids Killed in Crash

Berlin, July 1 (U.P.).—Four members of the band of Chancellor Adolf Hitler's official bodyguard were killed and six gravely injured tonight in an automobile accident while returning from a concert at Madgeburg, the official German news agency reported.

Hamilton

Hamilton devoted himself to an analysis of the "record and qualifications for high office of the Governor of Kansas." He said the Nation has had the opportunity to examine that record, "had heard him speak, clearly and definitely, his opinions on the major questions now at issue.

"Unlike the speeches of many figures in the public eye for the last three and a half years, those of Gov. Landon reflect his own thoughts and his own words," he said. "He does not believe in elaborate phrases, for he has nothing to hide. He does not indulge in personal bitterness, for there is no bitterness in his nature. He does not seek to divide men into classses, for like the majority of our citizens he does not admit the existence, in this country, of the foreign creed of class."

Passing on to more fulsome laudation of his candidate, Hamilton said:

"Gov. Landon is not the kind of man that Mr. Farley understands. He is not particularly interested in political manipulation, nor has he that flexibility of conscience enjoyed by others which allows them to promise all things to all men. * * * He believes in keeping his word. He tempers his own self-confidence with a belief in the ability of other men."

Hamilton concluded by predicting November victory at the polls, saying:

"Gov. Landon has the genius for creating unity; he has the habit of achieving victory. Under his leadership we need not doubt the issue, if we give to the party and the cause the same full measure of devotion they will receive from him."

Girl, 15, Is Slashed To Death by Razor

A 15-year-old colored girl was slashed to death early yesterday by a drink-crazed colored man with a razor. Her 13-year-old brother and another colored man also were cut.

Russell Moss, 50, 1323 Half street southwest, was arrested and charged with murder and two counts of assault with a deadly weapon.

The dead girl, Margaret Johnson, 15, of the Half street address, was found with her throat cut in a second-floor bedroom. Her brother, Lawrence, and Richard Wheeler, colored, 32, of 1315 Half street, were tretaed by a Casualty Hospital doctor for cuts.

Moss, said by police to be related to the children, became enraged after he had been drinking. He drew a razor and attacked the children and cut Wheeler when he interfered.

Mussolini's Daughter Reported Improving

Rome, July 1 (AP).—Government officials said tonight the condition of Anna Maria, 6-year-old daughter of Premier Mussolini, was "much better." She has been ill at Tivoli, presumably of infantile paralysis.

The child has passed the critical stage of her illness, but physicians have not determined whether the disease will have after-effects, it was stated.

Il Duce was at the little girl's bedside with his oldest daughter, Countess Ciano.

Father to Seek Clew From Boy In Hotel Killing

Flies to Chicago to Assist Police; Slain Hostess' Friends Questioned.

Chicago, July 1 (AP).—Hoping that 7-year-old Jimmy Thompson may yet supply the key to the mysterious killing of his mother, Mrs. Florence Thompson Castle, police turned the lad over to his father tonight for 48 hours of seclusion in which to reflect on his weird story of having seen her bludgeoned to death in bed.

Employing a bit of psychological strategy, Detective Chief John L. Sullivan gambled that the familiar companionship of his father and complete quiet would enable Jimmy to tell a coherent story of what he observed in his mother's hotel room early Monday.

Jimmy, bright and precocious, said "a big black man" beat Mrs. Castle with a brick while mother and son lay side by side in bed. The boy detailed a conversation he said he had with the assailant during the course of the assault.

Chief Sullivan said the boy was overwrought and possibly interpolated some boyish romancing. He expected to winnow truth from fiction after Jimmy had rested.

Flies From Boston.

His father, James Thompson, sr., Mrs. Castle's first husband, arrived here by plane from Boston today to offer help to police.

While Jimmy's story appeared the best hope of detectives, Prosecutor Mal Coughlan ordered scientists into the case to speed the "break."

As Dr. C. W. Muehlberger, noted crime laboratorian, and four aids plunged into one of the most scientific searches ever made in a slaying here, Coghlan said field investigators' main leads circled about numerous male acquaintances of the slain night club hostess. Some of them had criminal records, he said. Their records indicated also that the woman had been married three times.

Of the men sought for questioning about their association with the victim, one was an ex-convict, Edward Lynch, alias Ernest Levergne, and another James Britt, a patron of the "honky-tonk" where Mrs. Castle had been employed.

Police learned Mrs. Castle, in difficult financial circumstances, had recently made inquiries to ascertain if a Federal reward were posted for Lynch, a former inmate of Colorado State Prison, who is a fugitive on a robbery charge. A former husband of the slain woman, J. W. Bolin, is serving time in the prison for robbery. Investigators reported, however, that Lynch's fingerprints did not correspond to prints found in Mrs. Castle's room.

Britt, a former furrier at Stevens Point, Wis., was an admirer of Mrs. Castle, the authorities said.

Up Against Wall.

Other than that and hope that science might be able to reconstruct the crime from microscopic examination of blood spots, fingerprints, the scrawled "Black Legon game" message on the death room mirror, investigators were admittedly up against a blank wall.

They released Sidney Schaps, 32, master of ceremonies, who had been taken in custody principally because he was the latest companion of the woman. Police were convinced Schaps knew nothing of the crime.

A detective, who went to the scene of the murder early today to study lighting effects, said it would have been impossible for the lad to tell whether the man who killed his mother as he lay in bed beside her, was a white man or not.

telegram here, inquiring about his mother's condition and saying that if necessary he would leave the train to come here by plane.

Police Chief Williams Sears commented the train depot is "only a block from headquarters" but said he wasn't making any special preparations.

Democratic chieftains, who have been in a "don't quote me" stage ever since Zioncheck got into jail in Washington, indignantly asserted there would be no official welcoming party.

The woman aspirant to Zioncheck's office is Mrs. Mary O'Meara Pardee, 55, University of Washington honor graduate, who said she thought it was an "opportune time" for a woman to seek the position.

"I'm not running against Zioncheck or anyone else," she said. "I'm running for the office."

Plane Arrives.

The plane from which Zioncheck was denied passage at Chicago last night arrived this morning. Only five persons—three men and two women—were aboard.

F. J. Bixler, the company's traffic agent, said at Chicago that Zioncheck had been refused passage because he had not bought a ticket in advance and because the plane had a capacity load.

"I must admit also we were afraid to take him up," Bixler added. "While he was raising hell in the hangar, we reloaded the passengers and took off."

Speaking from the train in Minneapolis, Zioncheck modified a bit his promise last night to "sue the company."

"I don't know whether I'm going to sue them or not," he said, "but there's fertile ground there for a bit of spading."

Check Doubler Jailed, Double Has 'the Goods'

Attorney Gets Variety of Merchandise While Accused Gets Solitude.

Claude A. Thompson had double trouble.

But everything is all right now because Robert Osborne was sent to jail yesterday and Thompson is inclined to hope he won't get any more Bibles he didn't buy or saxophones he never purchased—to say nothing of breezy electric fan and five tons of coal, acquired at special summer prices.

Thompson has an office on the third floor of the Munsey Building and is an attorney. He went to Police Court yesterday to listen to the trial of Osborne, who allegedly made a comfortable living by scribbling Thompson's name on checks.

Given 360 Days in Jail.

The judge at Police Court told Osborne yesterday he would have to serve 360 days in jail because he had no business putting Thompson's name to checks and buying saxophones and electric fans with the proceeds.

The net result of the whole trial was that Osborne was convicted on nine counts of false representation, given a suspended sentence on seven of them, and told he must wait until the grand jury considered forgery charges against him.

Thompson sat in his law office yesterday and talked about Osborne.

"This fellow," he explained, "would sign my name as payee of a check and sign somebody else's name to it."

Fails to See Resemblance.

"Personally," said Thompson, looking toward the window where he could plainly see his reflection in the glass, "I don't think he looks much like me."

But others thought they did.

Osborne, who wrinkled his forehead over English books when he was young at the University of Pittsburgh and got a degree for his trouble, used to work here for an information service. He was listed on police books as unemployed.

Osborne is 44 and Thompson said he was about the same age.

They met Saturday for the first time after Osborne allegedly gave a check with Thompson's name on it to a coal dealer. Osborne, said Thompson, has caused him a lot of trouble.

A Bible Started It All.

"Well, sir, I was sitting up here in my office one day and a boy walks in with a Bible. That's when it started—June 1. I hadn't bought any Bible, but I found out that this fellow had bought one for me. He worked by giving a check for more than the cost of what he bought and putting the change in his pocket."

"Then I was informed I had bought a saxophone. Then I got a tuxedo. And a brand-new set of tires. One day I was told I had bought a lawn mower with a check made out to me.

"I got kodaks and watches. Of course, he bought them all."

But, the funny thing, complained Thompson, was:

"He never thought to buy me any law books."

Entombed Miner's Cries Spur Rescuers Tackling 40-Ft. Wall

'Please Hurry, I'm Being Squeezed Alive,' Screams Victim Pinned Six Hours in Small Room at Pennsylvania Shaft.

By the Associated Press.

Shamokin, Pa., July 1.—An entombed miner cried "Please hurry, I'm being squeezed alive" while miners dug tonight at a 40-foot wall of coal and rock.

Enoch Kulshinskie, jr., 35, lay pinned for six hours in a small room of a make-shift coal hole on North Mountain, and his 60-year-old father, rescued only a few hours earlier from a similar fate, worked with miners digging through the pile of heavy rock, coal and timbers.

George Jones, superintendent of the Cameron Colliery of the Stevens Coal Co., near the Kulshinskie's independent working, estimated it would require hours of almost superhuman work to reach the trapped man.

By that time, Jones said, Kulshinskie, who was caught at 10:30 a. m., might die of suffocation even if his injuries were not fatal. Although Jones has fought against independent mining, which operators charge deprives the established mines of millions of tons of production a year, he drove his crew of seven anthracite workers ceaselessly.

The younger Kulshinskie was entombed at the same time the fall caught his father, working at the shaft-end of the gangway about 30 feet underground. Rescuers quickly reached the father and he suffered only temporarily from shock.

Four days ago tons of rock fell in the mine, and officials of the Cameron Colliery warned independent workers not to go into the shaft.

Reporter Denied Plea for Parole

Baltimore, July 1 (AP).—Parole Commissioner W. David Tilghman denied today the request of David W. Lee, Washington newspaper reporter, for a parole on a contempt of court sentence.

Lee, a reporter for the Washington Herald, has served one month of a 90-day sentence imposed by the Montgomery County circuit court.

Tilghman said an investigation of the application had disclosed information adverse to the parole. He also said the three members of the court opposed granting the parole.

Lee and another reporter for the same paper were convicted of aiding in the publication of a secret verdict of the court. They appealed, and the court of appeals released the other reporter.

Gov. Nice announced today that he had granted two pardons and a number of paroles on Tilghman's recommendation. The men pardoned were Arthur B. Zang, sentenced on a statutory charge in Anne Arundel County, and Samuel V. Salafia, sentenced in Baltimore for receiving stolen goods. The Governor said he pardoned them to restore their citizenship. Zang was already on parole and Salafia was put on probation.

Head of School, Scored by Jury, Declines to Quit

Brutal Whippings Charged, Governor Demands His Resignation.

By the Associated Press.

Nashville, Tenn., July 1.—Superintendent G. Newt Choate, under whose administration the grand jury charged brutalities were practiced at the State Reform School, said tonight Gov. Hill McAlister asked for his resignation and that he refused to give it.

The grand jury in a formal report told of testimony of the "savage whipping" of youthful inmates while they lay prone "praying and pleading to God for help" and charged the institution is being "most inhumanely operated."

Choate and the Governor conferred this afternoon. The Governor declined to comment, saying he would have a statement tomorrow.

The grand jury report said that the superintendent "was not only advised of the terrible and inhuman treatment, but was nearby when the boys were being savagely whipped with those long leather straps, and had heard boy after boy, lying on his stomach with his hands crossed, praying and pleading to God for help."

The jury quoted the testimony of a former matron at the school who went to investigate when "one very small boy" was slow in getting up one morning.

"His bleeding back had stuck to the bedclothes and it was covered with blood from wounds inflicted the night before for a small infraction of the rules," the report said.

"When she approached the superintendent in behalf of these little helpless children, her pleadings were denied and she was given to understand that he, the superintendent, was running that institution and not she. She further testified that she had heard, with her own ears, 105 lashes given to one boy.

3.8 Billions of Loans Consolidated by Soviet

Moscow, July 1 (AP).—The Soviet government tonight ordered issuance of consolidated internal loan bonds totaling 19,000,000,000 rubles ($3,800,000,000), which will absorb seven outstanding industrial loans.

The interest rates will be cut 50 to 60 per cent. The order affects 50,000,000 bondholders, who were informed that the reduction in thier interest payments will be made up to them in the form of strengthening the ruble and decrease in the cost of necessities of life.

Mrs. Dill Upheld By Witnesses In Divorce Trial

Procession of Persons of All Classes Refutes Senator's Charges.

By the Associated Press.

Spokane, Wash., July 1.—A procession of witnesses today defended the personal tastes, domestic efficiency and social conduct of Mrs. C. C. Dill in rebuttal to her divorce-seeking husband, the former Senator, who called her slovenly, parsimonious and rude.

Dill's complaint that his wife, former suffragette leader, was "filthy" and "disreputable," brought the statement from Mrs. David C. Gallagher that the Senator's wife "dresses in taste, even when at work."

Mrs. Gallagher, a Stratford, Wash., political worker, asserted Mrs. Dill was no "snob" because she once went into an orchard and helped pick apples "just as if she wasn't wealthy and the wife of a United States Senator."

One of Dill's charges—that his wife's criticism of projects that had his support injured him politically—was disclaimed by Mrs. Gallagher.

The witnesses—society leaders, servants, laborers, farmers and political workers—moved quickly in Mrs. Dill's effort to block the former Senator's attempt to obtain a divorce.

Even the Colville Indians, who have a "natural suspicion" of people, liked Mrs. Dill, one witness testified. They made her a member of the tribe and gave her the name "Rainbow," the witness said.

Charges Denied By Helen Hayes At Balm Trial

Actress 'Can't Remember' Magazine Interviews About Romance.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 1.—Helen Hayes, diminutive stage and screen actress, testified today in defense of a $100,000 alienation of affection suit that she could not remember details of screen magazine interviews which purported to reveal her romance with her playwright husband, Charles MacArthur.

The suit, now four years old, was brought by Miss Carol Frink, movie critic for a Chicago newspaper, who divorced MacArthur in 1926. Miss Hayes and MacArthur were married August 17, 1928.

Speaking in low tones, occasionally chuckling at the "statements" she was purported to have made in the interviews, her answers for the most part were "yes," "no" and "I can't remember."

"I must have given 200 interviews," she said, of the 1930-32 period when she achieved fame in the movies. "I never read them over afterward for my peace of mind."

Her attorney, Jay Fred Reeve, had previously declared that Miss Hayes broke with her producers "because they pleased to ask her to change her type and appear as a glamorous person."

"She has the reputation of being a simple, sweet person, not the vampire type," Reeve said. "She refused to do two pictures because she refused to submit to that sort of thing."

She admitted statements from the interviews—written by Adena Reed and Adele Whiteley Fletcher—concerning her meeting with MacArthur at a studio party given in New York by Neysa McMein, an artist, one afternoon in December, 1924.

As told in the interviews, MacArthur was eating peanuts when he approached Miss Hayes, "petrified in a corner," and gave her some peanuts, telling her he wished "they were emeralds."

She denied, however, that she said "it was a case of love at first sight."

"That's not the sort of thing I could have said," protested the actress. "I didn't know his state of mind."

She admitted leasing a farm from Paul Hammond at Soyossett, Long Island, in the spring of 1925, and that MacArthur visited her there "four or five times."

Attorney Reeve had pictured his actress client as "shying away" from marriage because of the teachings of her mother and her manager, who, he said, told her that marriage would "ruin her career."

"While she was playing in 'Coquette' in November, 1927, MacArthur gave her an engagement ring, but it was not until the following August 17 that she gave in and married him," Reeve said.

In answer to the charge that Miss Hayes had "willfully" alienated the affections of MacArthur, Reeve declared that "apparently affection in Mr. MacArthur and his first wife did not exist at that time."

Mrs. Hewitt Wins Release on Bond

Jersey City, N. J., July 1 (AP).—Mrs. Maryon Cooper Hewitt was released in $3,500 bail today following her appearance before Police Judge Anthony J. Botti to face charges of attempted suicide and being a fugitive from justice in California.

Mrs. Hewitt, who has been a patient at Medical Center since February 21, when she allegedly took an overdose of a sedative, was so weak she had to be assisted by two nurses and a policeman. She returned to the hospital after bail had been supplied, but will be discharged, her physician said, in a few days.

Snake Death Trial Told of Accident

Los Angeles, July 1 (AP).—A story of the violent death of his fifth wife went into the record today of Robert S. James' trial for murder of his seventh wife—a crime the State charges was accomplished by rattlesnake poison and drowning.

Over strenuous defense objections, the prosecutions won the right to present evidence concerning the death in Colorado four years ago of Mrs. Winona James, fifth wife of the red-haired barber. At the time her death was attributed to accidental drowning in a tourist cabin bathtub.

The death of Mrs. Mary James, for which the barber is now on trial, also was attributed to drowning.

J. A. Rogers, superintendent of the Pike's Peak highway in Colorado, testified he was summoned to the scene of an automobile accident in which Mrs. Winona James was injured in 1932. In the front seat of the automobile, he said, he found a bloodstained hammer. The automobile had dropped 200 feet over a cliff.

The back of the seat, where Mrs James had been sitting, was covered with blood, Rogers testified. Mrs. James recovered from injuries suffered in the automobile accident, but drowned in her cottage home a short time later.

Power Increase Of WOL Fought By U. S. Expert

Would Clash With WFBR, in Baltimore, FCC Examiner Says.

Denial of the application of Station WOL to change its wave length and increase its power was recommended yesterday by Melvin H. Dalberg, for the Fedearl Communications Commission.

Dalberg said that, although a need exists for a more efficient signal from the station, there was no showing at the hearing in behalf of the increase "that the radiating efficiency of the antenna is equal to the specified X-X-X"

"Such an allocation as that herein requested," said Dalberg, "does not, therefore, appear to be in accordance with good engineering practice.

"Furthermore, the granting of this application would obviously cause objectionable interference to Station WFBR, at Baltimore, in the daytime hours."

WOL had requested authorization to change its wave length from 1,310 kilocycles to 1,230 kilocycles and to increase its power from 100 watts to 1,000 watts.

While the evidence clearly indicated that, by the granting of this application the signal of WOL would be increased throughout the Washington area, the usefulness of that signal at night would be severely curtailed by the operation of other stations on the same frequency, the examiner indicated.

"It is therefore believed," he concluded, "that the granting of this application will not serve public interest, convenience and necessity."

The body was turned over to Fairfax County, Va., authorities, to be claimed by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jay Stanley Smith, who live near McLean.

Shannon Heads Operations for Eastern Lines

Former Capital Student Is Appointed Manager by Air Service.

Sidney L. Shannon, a former student of Georgetown University and Washington Law School, is to be the new operations manager of Eastern Air Lines, it was announced yesterday.

He succeeds C. W. France, who has been elected vice president and general manager of the Curtiss-Wright Airplane Co. plant at Robertson, Mo.

In his new post, Shannon will supervise the line's entire system, covering the New York-to-Miami, New York-to-New Orleans and Chicago-to-Miami routes.

After attending elementary schools in this city, Shannon took a course in business administration at Georgetown University and then studied law for two years at the Washington Law School. He paid his way through college by working with his "Sid Shannon's Serenaders," which played throughout the District and nearby Virginia.

Rhodes Assails Roosevelt Rule In Talk to Club

Former U. S. Aid Asserts New Deal Has Killed Farm Markets.

Thomas E. Rhodes, a former assistant Attorney General, attacked the Roosevelt Administration as "the most disgraceful and infamous in the history of the nation" at a ratification meeting of the National Capital Republican Club last night.

Before more than 300 persons who jammed the club's headquarters at 1600 Rhode Island avenue northwest, Rhodes, introduced by Samuel J. Prescott, flayed the men and methods of the New Deal.

Particular objects of the speaker's verbal barrage were the agricultural adjustment act and the Bankhead cotton act.

These, Rhodes said, had impoverished the small farmer and had enriched the large landholders. In addition, he said the farmer's domestic and foreign markets had been destroyed.

The speaker quoted figures showing that the amount of corn and wheat imported into this country in 1935 was an increase over 1932 figures.

In curtailing its cotton crop, Rhodes said, the United States had lost much of its foreign market to Brazil and Egypt.

Accusing Roosevelt of violating his oath of office and of intimidating the courts, Rhodes charged further that the President had "refused the advice of the ablest men in his party and listened instead to crackpots."

"In charge of patronage he has put Big Jim Farley, a political gangster who has raked and ravished the civil service," Rhodes said.

Citing the increase in the national debt since Roosevelt took office, the speaker stated that "this country was solvent in 1932. It was in good financial condition. The Nation was ready to come back when this Administration came in and stopped economic recovery."

In closing, Rhodes termed Roosevelt "a city slicker who has clipped bonds his father left him" and urged the audience to lend their support to Landon, whom he characterized as "a man who has worked his way up from the soil."

Berkman Dies In French City; Barred by U. S.

Self-Inflicted Wound Is Fatal to Anarchist Living in Exile.

By the Associated Press.

Nice, France, July 1.—Rejected by both old and new orders, Alexander Berkman, the Anarchist, is dead—in disillusionment and, hospital authorities said, by his own hand.

A bullet wound in the stomach suffered last Saturday—the sixty-seventh birthday anniversary of his life-long friend and associate, Emma Goldman—ended the career of the 66-year-old drifter who served nearly 19 years in prison for his attack on the late Henry C. Frick, Pittsburgh steel magnate, in 1892.

Police said Berkman was in ill health and pronounced him a suicide. He had recently undergone an operation. His death Sunday, was not immediately announced, they said, because of variance in the name on his passport.

Neighbors were "shocked" when they heard Berkman had been an Anarchist. They said they knew him as a quiet man who translated Russian books into English and frequently received visitors from America.

They said he had been living in Nice "several years."

It was learned Berkman was buried yesterday in a small cemetery on the outskirts of Nice. Miss Goldman, it was said, arranged a simple funeral and there were no religious ceremonies.

Neighbors of Berkman accused the police of attempting to "hush up" the man's death. They said he always was known as Berkman to them, but authorities gave only a perfunctory death notice for publication, referring to Berkman as Bergmann-Schmidt, identifying him as a "German-Swiss." Police said his passport listed him under that name.

Neighbors said Berkman underwent an operation four months ago and later told them he was suffering from uremia.

Berkman lived in a small poorly furnished fifth floor apartment.

Berkman and Miss Goldman were deported from the United States in 1920 after Berkman's activities had covered a broad canvas of anti-capitalism conflicts.

He openly admitted in 1915 that a bomb explosion at 133d street and Lexington avenue in New York City which killed three men was a premature explosion, and that the bomb was being manufactured for use against John D. Rockefeller and his son.

Russia gave birth to Berkman and Miss Goldman. But communistic Russia, whose cause they championed in the United States, had no place for them.

Berkman left his native country a year after his return, in great bitterness. The Soviet pattern was a delusion, he declared.

On the transport Buford when he was deported Berkman was elected head of "The First Anarchist Commune Soviet of America."

He immediately predicted his return to the United States, scene of his many jailings and violence, as first Soviet ambassador.

But a quarrel with the Communists followed, and in 1921 he and Miss Goldman began their years of drifting as one country after another forced them to move on.

In Nice Berkman lived in seclusion in contrast to his years of notriety, and scratched out an existence with his translations. Police said the Nansen passport of Berkman, the type given Russia refugees, listed him as Alexander Bergmann-Schmidt. It showed his birthplace as Wilno, and gave the date as 1870.

Mercury in 60's, To Continue Today

July breezed into town yesterday and got a pretty chilly welcome.

The thermometer dropped to 65 at 3 p. m. yesterday and couldn't climb back to a July normal. The high for yesterday, the Weather Bureau reported, was 68.

And today, also, it will be cold. A racy thermometer which has been dancing up and down the temperature scale all the month of June will coagulate in the 60s today, the weather man predicted. Then it may turn warm again on Friday.

There was little rain yesterday—just a mist that brought little moisture to a parched and thirsty ground.

Today will be cloudy also, the weather man said.

Morgan Illness Is Kept Secret; Called Neuritis

Financier's New York Estate Under Armed Guard of Ex-Marines.

By the United Press.

Glen Cove, N. Y., July 1.—J. P. Morgan, one of the most powerful figures in world finance, lay ill tonight at his baronial island estate off this shore village, his exact condition a closely guarded secret.

The single bridge to the island was blocked to press and public by armed guards, recruited from husky former marines, who also patrolled the shores of the financier's private island.

Pale, weak and unable to move his legs, Morgan, now 68, was brought home from Manchester, Mass., in a record run this morning by ambulance and private train. Private guards and railroad detectives accompanied him, and at every station a heavy guard of local policemen deployed along the platform.

He is suffering from what his sons describe as neuritis.

The financier was carried from his train, his legs dangling limply. Then he was placed on a cot with wheels. Although he adjusted the upper part of his body himself, attendants had to lift his apparently lifeless legs to the cot.

New York associates of the financier said there was nothing alarming in his condition and that he was "progressing nicely." They explained that stretchers and ambulances were used for his trip home "to spare him the pain of walking."

Diagnosed at Thrombosis.

New York, July 1 (AP).—The New York Times quotes a member of the North Country Community Hospital staff as saying that J. P. Morgan suffered an attack of coronary thrombosis two weeks ago.

The physician is quoted as saying that the dangerous stage of the ailment, which comes from the formation of a clot in one of the arteries leading from the heart, had passed.

Soap Firm Plea For Tax Refund Denied by Court

Tribunal Upholds Previous Ruling in $160,000 Levy Appeal.

Possibility that the Treasury Department may have to refund to soap manufacturers the $26,000,000 it has collected on taxes imposed on the use of Philippine coconut oil, faded in the United States Court of Appeals yesterday when the court upheld a prior ruling of the United States District Court for the District, and ordered dismissal of a suit brough by Haskins Brother & Co. of Iowa.

The firm, which had paid approximately $160,000, claimed it was entitled to a refund because of the unconstitutionality of the tax, which the company paid under protest. The company sought to bring into the fold all soap manufacturers who had been similarly affected by the tax, which is now in the Treasury ear-marked for the Philippines government.

In adopting the ruling of Justice Jennings Bailey, of the District Court, that the suit should be dismissed, the Appellate Court held, first, that it was in the nature of a suit against the Government to which the Government had not consented—a prerequisite to a suit against any Federal agency; and secondly, that there was another remedy open to the Haskins Co., which, under a special act of Congress, may apply to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for a refund which can be granted without congressional action.

The money, while collected here as a tax, is to be paid to the Philippine government. The Appellate Court asserted that even if the tax was physically paid over to the Philippines, the companies that had been compelled to pay it through fear of penalties, could recover because under the law the Government's liability would not be affected.

The tax complained of was 3 cents a pound on "first domestic processing" and an additional tax of 2 cents on other oils not produced in the Philippines. Attorneys William Stanley and J. E. Burroughs, jr., represented the petitioners, while Robert H. Jackson and Sewell Key represented the Government.

The Appellate Court took occasion to praise the thoroughness with which both sides had prepared their cases.

Can you STOP your car like this?

If the hydraulic brakes in the average car were suddenly disconnected . . . purposely or otherwise . . . how would the driver stop? Could he think fast enough to reach for the hand brake, and pull himself to a stop in time? Or could he simply push the brake pedal just as usual . . . knowing that a separate safety braking system would take hold automatically and STOP his car smoothly and surely? Can you stop that way in your car?

You Can . . . in Hudson or Terraplane
(ONLY cars with Duo-Automatic Hydraulic Brakes)

Safest stopping ever built into any automobile . . . exclusive, patent applied for! That's what you get in a Hudson-built car, plus a third braking system, with the easy handling parking brake. But stopping is only one of the things a Hudson or Terraplane does better.

You can start faster, too. Hudsons and Terraplanes hold more official records for getaway, hill climbing and fast travel than any other standard automobiles built today.

You enjoy smoother performance, because Hudson was the first to engineer vibration out of automobile motors. No other motors today are so accurately balanced . . . no other cars, before or since, have run so smoothly.

You get greater comfort, because there's more room in a Hudson or Terraplane than in any other cars anywhere near them in price. And easier riding, because long, gentle, "natural rhythm" springs are free for the first time from steering and braking strains . . . have nothing to do but cushion your ride.

These are only the beginning of a big list of "extras" you'll discover in a Hudson or Terraplane. But they are enough, we think, to show how well it will pay you to come in . . . to drive . . . and get better acquainted with these cars.

"Lots of people driving Hudsons these days, Mister!"

Horror as Bus Crashed Is Told By 2 Witnesses

Woman Died of Terror, Says One; Driver Hero, Declares Other.

Woodstock, Va., July 1.—Two eyewitnesses, one a passenger aboard the ill-fated bus that crashed into an embankment and overturned near Natural Bridge, Va., with the loss of five lives, related their experiences here tonight. "I will never forget last night in that bus," said Marion B. Ring, a former employe in the circulation department of The Washington Post.

"Those screams, those sickening thuds of bodies against the steel bus—I lived several years in those seconds that took the lives of five people, and I'll carry the memory of the tragedy with me to the grave.

"We were coming down a hill at the bottom of which is a curve. It was raining slightly and the road was slick as glass. The driver applied his brakes and the bus skidded sidewards down the hill.

"He got it under control and again applied his brakes, and this time the bus crashed through the guard rail and turned over many times, tumbling down a steep embankment.

Fell Into Aisle.

"I could see the driver and the other people as they met death. When I saw the crash was inevitable, I fell to the aisle and grabbed hold of a seat. Then others fell on top of me. The boy with whom I was riding kicked out a glass and dragged me to safety from the wreckage.

"I was the second person out of the bus. We helped others out of the same window. One of the women who was killed didn't have a scratch on her. She must have died from sheer fright.

"After a little while a bus that had been following us came along and it seemed as though people appeared from everywhere. We were taken to Natural Bridge Hotel, where the injured were cared for and we were cleaned up.

"I was covered with blood from head to foot—mud, too."

Ring was slightly bruised and highly nervous.

Awakened by Sound.

Berenice Walker, who resides not 200 yards from where the crash occurred, said she was awakened by the screech of rubber skidding on the road.

"I was asleep," she said.

"I sleep not 200 yards from the tip of the bridge where the awful thing happened. The screeching noise was followed by rolling and crashing, and then through the night came the weird wail of an automobile horn blowing.

"It was apparent that the driver had been pinned in his cab, and died. He had, I am sure, died a hero, too.

"He had whipped the wheel, as the skid marks showed, directly into the hillside, on the west bank of the road. The impact must have crushed him instantly behind his wheel, but it stopped the onrushing bus."

Public Inspects Office Building Of Acacia Life

More Than 3,000 Visitors Are Guided Through by Employes.

With flowers in the lobby and in the executive offices and an orchestra playing soft music from a balcony, the new building of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. was thrown open to public inspection yesterday.

In exterior design, the new building, situated facing the Capitol at 51 Louisiana avenue, fits harmoniously with the Federal structures.

Inside, the appointments give the feeling of quiet efficiency—the kind of beauty that artists and architects call "functional." There is no wasted space, no purposeless ornaments.

That seemed to be the opinion of more than 3,000 visitors who were conducted through the offices yesterday by a corps of guides chosen from among the employes.

William Montgomery, who has headed the company for the past 42 years, was at hand greeting visitors. The thing he likes best about his new office is the view from the window.

"It's the best view in the city," he said. "Or, in the world, for that matter. There's only one Capitol."

Where Five Died in Virginia Bus Tragedy

Wreckage of bus that skidded at Natural Bridge, Va., overturning and crashing against a rock bank, causing death of five persons and injuries to 24 others.

curve where the highway crosses the Natural Bridge, mecca of beauty-seeking travelers.

Suddenly it skidded out of control, whirled crazily, crashed into the rock bank and overturned.

Until the moment of impact most of the passengers were asleep.

"It was all over before I even had time to get scared," asserted Marian B. Ring, of Roanoke, one of the passengers, who was but slightly injured.

The screech of rubber tires on the pavement awakened her, Bernice A. Walker, who lives within 200 yards of the spot where the disaster occurred, told officials.

Then, she said, she heard the wailing of an automobile horn. This was followed by the screams of terror-stricken passengers.

The call for rescue workers went, almost within a minute, to the Natural Bridge Hotel which is only a short distance away.

Emergency crews immediately were recruited. They met some of the uninjured passengers, including Horace Hidgins, of Christiansburg, Va., running through the beating rain to summon aid.

Ambulances and private automobiles sped to the scene of the disaster to evacuate the injured.

At the hospital in Lexington Va., the following were treated by physicians:

Mrs. Annette Burman, of 855 West End avenue, New York City, broken pelvis and nose, and cut scalp.

Her son, Allen Burman, 15, burns from exploding gasoline.

Philip Robert Burman, another son, shattered lower jaw and multiple bruises.

Miss Cecilia Burrow, 25, of Hampton, Tenn., severe gasoline burns.

Henry D. Eisenman, 29, of 105 Edgehill road, Richmond, Va., broken left arm and cuts of ears and legs.

Miss Elizabeth Tyler, 29, of Bristol, Tenn., fractured ribs and cut nose.

Mrs. T. E. Connors, 26, of 4164 Green avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., bruised hip.

Others, who sustained minor bruises and cuts, remained at the Natural Bridge Hotel.

C. J. Avery, of Staunton, Va., however, was bruised about his ribs, and was removed to Lexington, Va.

It was easily possible for the bus to have broken through the stout fence along the highway, officials said.

The highway, however, is protected by trees on either end of the bridge for a considerable distance.

The bus, it was learned, stopped short of the span. Here, the bridge is 90 feet long, and from 50 to 100 feet wide. Beneath it 215 feet flows turbulent Cedar Creek, one of Virginia's historic and scenic streams.

A greater disaster was prevented by the fact most of the passengers were sleeping peacefully, and no one was smoking aboard the bus, Eisenman said.

"The fuel tank," he stated, "had broken, and gasoline streamed through the bus."

He added that the fluid entered the wounds of the injured.

"If anyone had been smoking when the accident occurred, I'm sure all of us would have been trapped in an inferno," he said.

The Richmond resident said he heard only one piercing scream, then saw the driver wrestling with the steering wheel. A moment later he felt the sway as the bus careened.

Both roof and front of the bus were crushed down like a pancake.

But they ballooned upward again after the first smashing impact, probably saving the lives of those who rode back of the front seats.

"If the backs of the chairs had not been strong, all of us might have been pulverized as the floor and roof came together," said Eisenman, from his hospital cot.

"It was only those backs that prevented the tragedy from being worse than it is."

One of the heroes of the tragedy, according to W. E. Delaney, manager of a nearby hotel, was Philip Burman. His jaw smashed, the youngster helped extricate his mother and brother.

"I can't cry, because it might worry mother," the boy was quoted as saying by Delaney, who took him to a hospital.

Most of the passengers appeared in a daze, Delaney said.

The accident was attributed to the rain by Dr. E. P. Tompkins, coroner of Rockbridge County.

He said darkness and the slippery road had much to do with the disaster. The bus, he pointed out, must have bounced against a wall of rock on one side of the road, and over a steel fence on the other. Smashing six posts before it came to rest on its top.

Mexican Highway Opened to Traffic

Laredo, Tex., July 1 (AP).—The nine-year-old dream of Mexican officials—the Pan-American highway—came true today as the $17,000,000 thoroughfare was opened to traffic, with Vice President Garner and Mexican dignitaries joining hands in an international expression of friendship.

The highway, linking the Texas border with Mexico's scenic interior, was officially opened amid impressive ceremony.

In Washington, President Roosevelt congratulated the Mexican people "on the auspicious occasion of the opening of the Mexico City-Nuevo Laredo highway."

The ruddy Vice President, whose Uvalde home is not far from the first mile of the highway, said "a great link has been forged in the chain uniting in friendliness these two republics."

D. C. Carpenter Killed in Crash Had Lost Job

Wife Reveals John Keese Was Returning Home From Grattan, Va.

John Keese, 29, of 1495 Newton street northwest, was returning home without a job when the bus in which he was riding crashed on Natural Bridge, Va., Tuesday night, his widow, Mrs. Hannah Keese, Treasury clerk, said yesterday.

Her face was pinched with sorrow as she talked in broken sentences of her husband, a carpenter, who was killed in the accident.

"I didn't even know it till noon today," she said. "I was at my desk when they told me. At first I couldn't believe it.

"You know," she said, pointing to the radio in her small apartment, "if I had turned the radio on this morning, I would have known. But I didn't hear till lunch time.

"It's awful.

"My husband was coming home," she said. "He'd been working down in Gratton, Va. I think he said he was working on a bank building down there.

"But his work was over. That's why he was coming home. He'd been down there since April. I just got a letter from him. It doesn't sound real.

"No, he didn't have more work in prospect. He didn't know where he was going to work."

"You see, it's pretty steady work, and I don't know exactly what I'd do."

Mrs. Keese said she had been married 3 years.

The body will be shipped to Bluefield, W. Va., for burial. Funeral arrangements have not been made.

Mrs. Keese left last night for Bluefield.

Surviving are three brothers, William Keese, Mount Rainier, Md.; Harry, Bluefield, W. Va., and Oscar, of Norfolk, Va., and three sisters, Mrs. Lewis Gregory, Mrs. Walter Bourn, of Bluefield, and Mrs. George Gregory, of Gratton, Va., with whom Keese was staying while he worked there.

Danger In Danzig.

At a time when League statesmen already have their hands full with the problems arising out of Italy's conquest of Ethiopia, another load of dynamite has been laid at their doorsteps.

In the Free City of Danzig, which is under the supervision of the League, the Nazi leader, Albert Forster, has issued a "declaration of independence." The League and the League high commissioner, he said, have become "superfluous" in Danzig affairs. Since there is every reason to believe that this declaration was not issued without the knowledge and consent of Berlin, it creates the presumption that the Hitler government is planning a coup d'etat in the Free City or, at least, is testing out the ground in preparation for such action.

Since May, 1933, when they captured the Diet, the Danzig Nazis have waged unceasing war against the League's authority, even while rendering lip service to the Danzig constitution and the Versailles treaty provisions separating Danzig from Germany and giving it an autonomous status under the supervision of Geneva. As recently as last February the Danzig Senate, after having been called to account by the League Council, agreed to abrogate decrees which infringed on the rights of Socialist, Communist and Catholic minorities.

Subsequent developments have shown this pledge of good behavior to be meaningless. The Hitler government has never taken kindly to the fact that, in contrast to the situation in the Third Reich, where every form of opposition had been ruthlessly wiped out, in Danzig Socialist, Communist, Catholic and other opposition parties continued to exist, if precariously. But for months the Nazis in Danzig, in control of the machinery of government, have carried out a reign of terror against these groups.

With the League at the low ebb of its fortunes, it should occasion no surprise if the Berlin government should regard the present moment as an excellent one in which to present the powers with another fait accompli similar to that of March 7, when the demilitarized Rhine zone was occupied. The annexation of Danzig would be of a piece with that act and its international consequences might prove to be fully as disturbing.

Plainly the League cannot shut its eyes to what is threatening in Danzig. But whether League members will provide the Geneva organization with the strength it needs to cope with the situation in Danzig is by no means certain.

Crude System of Barter.

Australia has been placed on the list of countries to which the United States refuses to extend the concessions incorporated in reciprocal trade agreements. Since it is our policy to generalize these concessions, our action is viewed as a retaliatory measure due to Australian discrimination against American goods.

Recently Australia established a system of import licenses designed to cut down purchases from countries with which her balance of trade is unfavorable. Since we sell a much larger amount of goods to Australia yearly than we buy, our products are being excluded from Australian markets under the new system. Certain articles, such as typewriters, are given preferred treatment, but in other cases, applications for licenses must indicate that the goods can only be procured at greatly increased costs from countries with a balance of trade in Australia's favor. It is alleged, therefore, that the rules laid down by the collectors of customs amount to discrimination against products from the United States.

Australia's action draws attention to the often forgotten fact that high tariffs are not the only, indeed, not even the most formidable barrier to international trade at the present time. The efforts of many countries to build up a favorable balance of trade or to cut down an unfavorable one have led to all sorts of arrangements that amount in effect to saying: "I will buy from you, if you will take my goods in payment." Thus the once "refined system of barter" which enabled trading nations to pay for imports from country A by selling goods to country B has in many cases degenerated into a very crude form of direct barter which diverts custom to country X or Y, or Z, merely because the buyer has export balances there.

To some extent, such shifts have been unavoidable, as is the case with Germany —a country virtually compelled to enter into clearing agreements by creditor countries that buy more from Germany than they sell to her. The bad effect of such practices, however, in diverting trade from the channels in which it would otherwise flow is evident. Purchases are made, not in the market which offers the best bargains at the best prices, but in the market where export balances exist. The result is to reduce the volume of buying and selling and bring about a general restriction of foreign trade.

Nevertheless, the existence of such practices creates abnormal conditions that encourage if they do not force other nations to follow the uneconomic example set by hard-pressed countries. In the case of Australia, nationalist sentiment—a desire to encourage domestic industries—provides an additional reason for the favor with which a licensing system to shut out foreign goods is viewed.

End Of Fiscal Year.

With only one day unaccounted for, the Federal Government reported a deficit of $4,727,000,000 for the fiscal year just ended, as compared with a deficit of $3,575,000,000 for the corresponding period of the preceding year.

This great and growing gap between income and outgo is entirely due to the rising scale of expenditures, as receipts exceeded the totals for a year ago by approximately $300,000,000 in spite of the loss of invalidated processing taxes expected to yield $529,000,000. Hence, even making full allowance for the drain due to bonus payments, the Administration must accept responsibility for a huge deficit that cannot be laid to the Supreme Court or the intransigeance of Congress in overruling the President's bonus veto.

No amount of explanation or defensive excuses, moreover, can obscure the gravity of the fiscal problem as reflected in the rapid rise in Federal indebtedness. The debt has increased over $5,000,000,000 during the past year and is more than $11,000,000,000 higher than it was at the end of June, 1933. The record of the second session of the Seventy-fourth Congress disappoints any hopes that a halt is about to be called to this process of debt accretion. Bills carrying authorization to spend over $10,000,000,000 were then approved. Although the authorized outlays will not be altogether concentrated in the next fiscal year, analysis indicates that the volume of spending will not be substantially diminished.

Chairman Buchanan of the House Appropriations Committee believes that "except for such expenditures as may be necessary to conclude the payments for adjusted compensation and provide for relief, the expenditures will otherwise be within the revenues." However, as the relief outlays are placed at $3,600,000,000, Mr. Buchanan's assurances are very cold comfort.

The effort of the chairman of the Appropriations Committee to minimize the importance of current deficits is characteristic of apologists for the spending program of the Administration. The same disposition to attribute our fiscal difficulties entirely to the exigencies of a passing emergency was in evidence at Philadelphia, where both Senator Barkley and Senator Robinson strove with an ingenuity worthy of a better cause to "cry down" the deficit as a campaign issue. This attitude is perturbing chiefly because it reveals a marked reluctance to admit the need for immediate retrenchment. The hope that something will turn up to solve the fiscal problem has not been relinquished, it seems, although the pretense that the Administration is confronted by a merely temporary relief problem is wearing exceedingly thin.

The fact that a large number of State governments have already decided to place their own relief agencies on a permanent basis strengthens the belief that the unemployment problem will be with us for an indefinite future. The Federal Government will probably be called upon for a long time to continue to support the unemployed either directly, as at present, or through grants-in-aid to the States. For that reason no time should be lost in considering ways and means of reducing Federal relief expenditures to a minimum consistent with humanitarian standards. Steps should also be taken to cut the costs of governmental establishments whose extravagant spending is not excusable on the score of emergency.

Retiring Comptroller General McCarl has emphasized the existence of needless waste due to the multiplication of New Deal agencies not subject to the usual checks imposed upon spending. Reorganization of the regular Government establishment and elimination or absorption of many so-called temporary agencies—the objective of the Byrd investigating committee—would do a great deal to cut the deficit. But there must be, in addition, a willingness to revise governmental policies that necessitate extravagant outlays. Organization on an efficient basis is vitally important, but is not enough.

So long as the Administration spokesmen continue to dodge the issue, refusing to face the facts of the case, hopes of speedy budgetary balance are very dim. Federal and local governments are estimated to be spending sums equal to about 30 per cent of the national income. Some of that money is collected from taxpayers; some of it is borrowed; but all of it diverts purchasing power from private into public channels. Furthermore, the borrowed dollars constitute a future charge upon taxpayers, who will be called upon to make payments on the public debt.

If obligations already incurred are to be borne without adding intolerable burdens to the already oppressively high taxes levied upon the people and their producing industries, a stop must be put to the remorseless process of creating new debts. The specious plea that retrenchment would mean want and suffering for the unemployed cannot survive an analytical scrutiny of the spending record of the last Congress.

The Abbey And The Siren.

It is 32 years since a handful of Irish playwrights and actors moved light-heartedly from their cramped quarters in Molesworth Hall into the old Mechanics' Institute Theater down by Dublin's fog-cloaked quays. With limited capital, their start was inauspicious. They played to poor houses. For a time actor and author gave freely of their time and their work. Moreover, the public was apathetic, if not actually hostile, and the extreme Irish nationalists eyed the little group of artists with suspicion.

But the faith of the founders in the final success of the Abbey Theater, as they called their playhouse, never wavered. "I would sooner our theater fail," wrote William Butler Yeats at the time, "through the indifference or hostility of our audiences than gain an immense popularity by any loss of freedom."

Bitter years followed. John M. Synge's plays caused a storm of protest from the ignorant and the self-righteous, and for a time they were banned. Ireland, it seemed, could smile indulgently on the single, whisky-drinking, humorous type, portrayed so boisterously by Lever and Lover, but she could not forgive the holding of the mirror up to the vices of the country-side.

But Ireland and the Abbey have traveled far since those pioneer days. True, Sean O'Casey's delineation of the slum-dweller, "crawling out of the slitherin' slime of the sea," was as violently condemned as Synge's jibes at the peasantry. But for the most part the old touchiness is gone. The Abbey, too, has had, still has, its triumphs, and its strutting players have been acclaimed the world over for the faultless freshness of their acting, for their fidelity to Art.

And we in America who welcomed them in the flesh and gloried in their triumphs will soon see them in another guise. With the recent signing by R. K. O. in Dublin of Dennis O'Dea (whom we saw in a minor role in "The Informer"), five of the Abbey Players have now been contracted to start work on the filming of O'Casey's "Plough and the Stars," July 15.

For years Hollywood, siren-fashion, has wooed them with its golden song, but like the mariners of legend they stuck wax in their ears, though they were sorely tempted. But the lure proved too great. Hollywood triumphed.

Like Fluther Good, in O'Casey's immortal play, we shall not say anything "derogatory." We hail them anew in our midst. As we exulted in their yesteryear, we shall glory in their tomorrow.

Roman Holiday.

Probably one of the strangest, and certainly one of the grimmest, commentaries on American civilization is that annually provided by the toll in life and limb which the public permits as if it were indispensable to a patriotic observance of the Nation's birthday. Every year, on the Fourth of July and for a week preceding and a week following it, the casualties run riot. In 1935, nearly 8,000 persons were injured during these "celebrations." In 24 cases, an eye had to be removed. In eleven others, there was total loss of sight in one eye or both. Thirty people, mostly young folk, were killed.

John Williams Avirett 2d, president of the Maryland Society for the Prevention of Blindness, has made this statement, as the result of a thorough investigation: "I do not see how there can be any distinction between firecrackers over 5 inches in length and those under 5 inches in length, or between those containing gunpowder and those containing some other explosive substance—they are all dangerous."

According to the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, quoting Dr. Leland E. Cofer, former Assistant Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service, "the common firecracker is in the aggregate the most dangerous of all" Fourth of July dangers. But "harmless" fireworks? "There are," in Dr. Cofer's opinion, "no such things."

Washington's particular peril is suburban. Whereas the city is protected by ordinances forbidding the sale and private use of fireworks, a brief ride by bus or trolley takes children over the District line into areas where no such rules are in force. Yet those neighboring areas are almost a unit with the Capital. They share, through co-operation, the metropolitan sanitary benefits. It would be well if, through similar co-operation, they shared also the Capital's antifireworks regulations.

An investigation ought to be made of the Postoffice Department, which continues to report a deficit, to determine what it does with all the money received for stamps which are used on those thousands and thousands of fan letters the radio artists talk about every night.

The average fundamentalist not only doesn't believe in evolution—he isn't even in favor of it.

"Performing a difficult task before breakfast will spoil your entire day," a physician declares. So that's what has been the matter with our days!—we've been getting up before breakfast.

Letters To The Editor.

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the Editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

Feud For Thought.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That communication of H. T. C's., in The Post of June 30, throwing off on the pronunciation heard over the radio during the recent convention in Philadelphia, cannot go unanswered. For, strange as it seems, I had these same thoughts while listening in on the doings of the Republicans at Cleveland and shuddered at the maltreatments of harmless, everyday words. Some of the worst Americanisms ever perpetrated by the speaking public were airwaved from that scene of activities; the most noticeable being that so enchanted were they with the letter "I," they entirely overlooked that apparently insignificant letter "U."

This latter is fast becoming the forgotten letter in the English language as spoken by Americans. Here are a few words gleaned from the thousands that flowed over the ether from Cleveland, in which "U" was left out, and "oo" substituted.

Heading the list, of course, is "ConstitOOtion" and Herbert Hoover, who used it so often, was therefore chief offender. The second word is the over-worked "absolOOtely," and the following in quick succession is "enthOOsiasm," "illOOminating," "nOOs," "salOOte," "resolOOte," "endOOrance," "dOOring," "avenOO," "substitOOte" and so on, ad infinitum.

If we took as much pride in speaking our language in its greatest purity, as we do in our party achievements, then truly we could individually and collectively "point with pride." FLORIDIAN.
Washington, June 30.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Let me add my bit to the list of radio pronunciations during the Democratic Convention given in this morning's Post by H. T. C.

The speaker perhaps had just been reading Sheridan's "Rivals." At all events his remark was worthy of Mrs. Malaprop. He said: "I hesitate to speak after the gentleman who just proceeded me."

And why do they all, even President Roosevelt, say Awmerawkaw for America? CLAUS BOGEL.
Washington, June 30.

The Transit Problem.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is but one possible solution of the transportation problem in the City of Washington, namely, for Congress to authorize the District Government to condemn the properties of the transportation company, and take them over at a fair valuation, and operate them as a municipal utility. The act authorizing this should empower the District Government to issue long term bonds to raise the money to pay for the properties. When thus acquired the properties should not be operated for profit, but solely for and in the interest of the general and local governments in furnishing efficient transportation to their employes, who constitute, perhaps, 80 per cent of those who use the cars and buses—the other 20 per cent either operating their own cars or using taxies.

The properties should not be operated for profit, in which event they could be maintained properly and operated efficiently for a fare of 3 cents, or better still by the continuance of the present pass system, which would also yield enough revenue to pay interest on the bonds and to create a sinking fund sufficient to pay off the bonds when they become due.

I am fundamentally opposed in principle to government ownership and operation of anything not strictly of a governmental nature, and believe that everything else should ordinarily be left to private enterprise, subject, of course, to government regulation if affected with a public interest. But the City of Washington presents a unique situation, and one that justifies an exception to this general rule. This is the Nation's Capital, and was established primarily for governmental purposes.

Private ownership and operation of the transportation facilities here have been incompetent, inefficient and utterly indifferent to the needs of the public, and the service is going from bad to worse. Ownership and operation by the municipality would be, for the reasons herein stated, really operation for and in the interest of the local and general governments, which after all is the justification for this proposal.

"The Marine Commission."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read your June 25 editorial, "The Marine Commission," with interest and approval.

An able commission, with ample authority and funds, can give the American merchant marine the kind of assistance and confidence it so badly needs. But something more is needed. Unless there be a free flow of commerce, the larger success required for our merchant marine cannot be attained. Trade barriers must be removed insofar as it is possible to remove them.

The new Merchant Marine Commission will be in position to learn of all trade barriers, and should not only be required, but encouraged to come back to Congress directly with fully informed recommendations for action that will open trade channels to our merchant marine.

In the past, a rapidly expanding, huge profit-earning pioneer world debtor nation generated opportunity in every direction and prosperity was generally in evidence. We exported in payment of debts. Annually we owed huge sums abroad because of extensive investments by foreigners in the United States; heavy travel abroad by citizens of the United States, and the like. An ever-expanding export market resulted. The fact that we could sell all our surplus products encouraged an ever-expanding agriculture and industry at home.

Under these conditions, the people of the United States, or most of them, gained the mistaken idea that prosperity belonged to them as a right and as an inheritance and not as a result of sound thinking and sound acting.

Then, as a result of overlending and overselling, the United States changed to world creditor. It made no preparation for the change. And so fell into a triple impasse. It is now a surplus country, a creditor country, and a high tariff country.

Not understanding the rules applicable to a surplus producing world creditor country, the United States has been trying to function as a creditor under a set of rules which apply only to a world debtor status.

The correction of this unhappy condition will face the new Merchant Marine Commission, and it would be in the public interest for the responsibility of making constructive recommendations to Congress to be placed squarely on the shoulders of the Merchant Marine Commission. WALTER PARKER,
Chairman National Committee on Safety at Sea.

The Deal For Women.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Everybody's doing it"—expressing opinions pro and con with regard to the platforms adopted at the recent political conventions; so here are some of mine.

Women did not get a square deal at either conclave, though the Democrats made the better showing. The knights of the political round table no doubt thought they were sufficiently attentive to women by allowing a few crumbs to fall into their eager hands, making sure that the "weak and helpless" were properly protected. Shades of the "Woman's Battalion of Death" and the World War heroines!

Of course, a little advancement is preferable to none, but the feminine Oliver Twists are not satisfied. They dare to ask for more—a complete citizenship status equal to that of free men. The only trouble is, there aren't enough of them. Ancient custom and tradition die hard.

Futile Hurry?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A year ago Secretary Ickes put up a big fight to get his new building started and was a bit annoyed by the fact that all other projects were getting attention and his own building left out.

His building was finally started and it wasn't long before he put up another fight to push the project and speed it up. This was done by placing three 8-hour shifts on the job, working at night with the aid of dishpan flood lights. The huge and massive structure is still in the process of being completed, but it will be some time yet before it is completed.

So after all of his fighting, he may not have the opportunity to use or get the full benefit of the building he has erected in a hurry. It looks now as if Mr. Ickes is going to lose his chance of being a tenant in the new building. ROBERT BURKE.

Roosevelt Pictures.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We are thankful to The Post for giving us a picture of our beloved President with a fighting face, expressing power, determination, strength, confidence and real goodness.

In the beginning of his Administration, some of our columnists weren't so keen about his broad, ready smile. And we know some people who think that because he has that loveable geniality that he must be lacking in strength of character. Well, this writer thinks he is going to fool them.

It is easy to criticize, but just let any of his critics face what he has had to face and do half as well.

And, oh, we are deeply grateful for the beautiful group picture of his family. It is superfine; nice enough to frame. That precious mother beaming upon her illustrious son and the charming, smiling wife!

Bethesda Laboratory.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now and then there have been in The Post and other papers articles telling about the horrors of vivisection and deploring the prevailing indifference. Would it not be possible for such who have any abhorrence of cruelty to join in a protest that would have to be heard concerning the establishment of a new laboratory at Rockville Pike, Bethesda, Md.

Residents of Rockville Pike and the Commissioners of Montgomery County at first objected to the establishment of such an institution in such a fashionable neighborhood, but as promises have been made that the laboratory work will be done inside and that the buildings and surrounding grounds will be "beautiful," it appears that opposition has vanished through false promises about "health" for humans. Modernizing The Vow.

On the ground that it is "needless and irritating," the National Council of Congregational and Christian Churches will be asked when it holds its biennial meeting this week to direct the omission of the word "obey" from marriage ceremonies in the future. A heritage from the days when women were classed with imbeciles, infants and morons, the obedience vow has long since ceased to have any real meaning to those entering upon matrimony.

In many denominations the vow is no longer exacted of the distaff partner. So far as any one is able to learn, these marriages are as lasting and as happy as those in which the bride promised to render obedience. Many males have learned, to their sorrow, that the vow can quickly be forgotten. We venture the opinion that regardless of the action of the council, women will continue to regard the vow as they always have. Nor can we think of any reason why they shouldn't.

The Post Impressionist

Captious Criticisms.

Post Office, Thursday.

FOR more than two years—for well nigh 28 months, for something like 840 days—this columnist has been conducting a perfectly good-natured column. Now we feel the need of at least one excursion into the flowered fields of peevishness.

So thither we go.

Houghton-Mifflin's newest "News of New Books" announces that John Buchan—now Lord Tweedsmuir and Governor-General of Canada—"does some of his best work in automobiles."

Query: Was that where he did "The Thirty-Nine Steps?"

Otherwise, what's surprising about the performance of good work in automobiles? It's in automobiles that Sir Malcolm Campbell, another good Scot, does his best work, too.

And the same bulletin informs us:

"Taking the title of his novel, 'Invincible Surmise,' from a well-known couplet of Santayana's, Granville Paul says that the theme of his story lies in the single sentence, 'He had reached the decision to stake everything on the existence of some untapped resource of his nature which, when called upon for a supreme effort, would infallibly respond.'"

Stake: "To put at hazard upon the issue of a competition, to wager."

So Mr. Smith makes a hero of a man who'd stoop to bet on a sure thing!

The decline of good English is the perpetual despair of its professors. If you consult their dolorous records you will be impelled to the conclusion that this retrogression has been going on ever since the language started.

The wonder is that today there is any good English left.

For this columnist's part, however, the worst decline of 1936 is the decline of Platform English. We aren't overly concerned with what either the Republican or Democratic platform says, but we properly view with alarm the way both of them say it.

From the very foundation of the two-party system in America, Platform English was an independent tongue, completely autocephalous, the glory of the tautologist, the politician's pride. Well, this year's crop is blighted.

Out of every hundred words there are scarcely 75 that could have been conveniently omitted. About the best phrase of the old sort that these modern lads have been able to produce is:

"The safeguarding of security."

Take even the gossip of the conventions that adopted these platforms . . .

If Mrs. Essary hadn't told us, we shouldn't have accepted it as fact. In her delightful daily column, she—writing of the Democratic gathering at Philadelphia—meticulously reports:

"'Said Mrs. Robinson to Mrs. Barkley:

"'Joe's speech wasn't half as fine as Alben's.'

"Replied Mrs. Barkley:

"'Why, my dear, Alben never could talk as well as Joe.'"

And Mrs. Essary is so soft-hearted that she gives this anecdote as an example of "Southern ladies at their best"

When Mrs. Robinson and Mrs. Barkley and all other Southern ladies are at their best they say that Joe's speech wasn't half so fine as Alben's, and that Alben never could talk so well as Joe.

Nevertheless, in all this welter of gloom there shines one welcome ray.

Did you listen to the acceptance speeches, vice-presidential and presidential, on the sultry air of Saturday evening last—and to the notifications preceding them? If you did, you may have remarked how Senator Robinson, with all the deftness of a professional radio juggler, shifted the scene from Pennsylvania to Illinois ("the Democratic Convention assembled in Chicago")—how Mr. Garner cleverly put his trust in a faith, instead of putting any faith in any trust ("In that faith I put my trust"). Nor could you have missed Mr. Franklin Roosevelt's appeal to "alliteration's artful aid" ("Palace of privilege . . . To learn to do better as the path proceeds").

But, if you didn't listen very carefully indeed, you must have missed evidence which, rightly considered, goes far toward proving that No. 2 Man on the Democratic ticket is far from being in complete accord with No. 1 Man.

They agree, it is true, on "governmunt." Yet, although the President believes in "America," his running-mate remains an "Amuricun."

P. S.: Alas, when we "listened in on" the Cleveland show, we had no pencil handy!

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Domestic Mud-Slinging.

Going back over the many harsh remarks which were bandied between the Republican and Democratic Conventions this month, I sincerely hope the neighbors were polite enough to slam their windows and pay no attention.

Every four years in this country we get down to plain truth telling, and, although we heartily enjoy these acrimonious months of you're-another-ing, the criticism is not intended for the export trade. This is our own little family row, and in the heat of the scrap we often raise our voices and let fly with nasty cracks which we would not enjoy hearing repeated by outsiders.

Yet should they happen to have heard some of the strife we can hardly accuse them of eavesdropping, for goodness knows we made no effort to keep any secrets. We called each other grafters, Fascists, economic royalists, demagogues, payroll patriots and hypocrites, and we humiliated our democratic system, of which we are so proud in public, by resorting to circus stuff in the performance of a rite which all of us would like the world to regard as a very solemn business.

Now both sides will go up and down the land each accusing the other of dishonesty and each predicting disaster in the event of the other's success. Inasmuch as these two parties at present represent a vast majority of the political character of the country, an outsider taking them at their word might come to the conclusion that we must be a pretty rotten lot.

* * * *

Yet I think we would be very sensitive and inclined to snarl back if the English, French or German papers should begin to repeat in their columns as unqualified truths the criticisms of us which they could scarcely help overhearing, so loud and abandoned were the outcries at the two big meetings. They could cite our own public leaders as their authority for these disparaging opinions, and that would be most embarrassing, because, by and large, we still insist that they are true when we talk things over among ourselves.

Taking these hot denunciations literally, the German Nazi might incline to a belief that his system of government is not so bad, after all. He undoubtedly has heard that the delegates to the Democratic convention were without any authority in the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt and the composition of the platform, and he might ask himself what difference there is between that situation and the German plebiscite, in which the voters merely indorse the ticket. He must have heard, too, during the Republican convention that the United States Congress was just a rubber stamp, bribed by patronage or coerced by political pressure to approve the single will of the President, and compared that body to his own mock legislature.

In this the Nazi would be slightly mistaken, if only because in his country it is strictly forbidden to rear back at a public meeting and hurl raspberries at the head man or anyone in his government. They can chop your head off for that in Germany. In Germany it isn't even permitted to hurl raspberries at the German equivalent of James A. Farley, and everyone in the United States realizes that a good many of us would choke up and explode if we weren't allowed to take swings at our James. In Germany they don't even allow public meetings except under the auspices of the head man, and you may be sure that he doesn't issue any permits for meetings at which he is going to get the worst of it.

Still, we do manage to blab a lot of family secrets in these temperish domestic rows every four years, and I think it is real nice of the neighbors—especially the Canadians, right next door, who speak the same language and can't help hearing every word we say—to pretend they were off visiting relatives and didn't even know we were tossing crockery around our little home. There must be times during the big campaigns when they find it hard to sleep and feel tempted to call the cops to fan us with their bats and cool us off. So it shows good breeding on their part that they almost never ask an American, "Tell me, is it really true that your President is a terrible man bent on destroying the liberty of your people and substituting communism for democracy?"

* * * *

There seems to be no way of conducting these campaigns in privacy, because politics consists largely of shouting, and nobody has yet learned to shout in a whisper. I once heard a pair of vaudeville clowns who got away with something of the kind. Warned for fighting in their dressing room and disturbing the act on the stage, they would punch each other on the chin, then put a finger to their lips and say, "Sh-sh-sh." They they would sock each other again and say "Sh-sh-sh!" again. But the plan doesn't seem feasible on a national scale.

Yes, the neighbors have been real polite up to now, but this is the severest test of their manners in a hundred years. Now we shall learn whether they can really take it. If they lean over the back fence next November and say, "It's been awful quiet over at your house this summer; anybody sick?" we shall know they are thoroughbred gentlemen.

Pillsbury Hurt in Crash; Son of Flour Magnate

Fort Wayne, Ind., July 1 (AP).—Charles Pillsbury, 19, of Crystal Bay, Minn., son of John S. Pillsbury, flour manufacturer, and a student at Yale University, was injured when his automobile collided with a truck near here today.

The youth was taken to a hospital where an X-ray examination was made. Hospital attaches said it was likely the lower vertebrae had been injured.

powers, in a farewell message distributed to all Accounting Office employes.

Monday, in an informal talk to newspapermen, he had offered his services to the Byrd committee, and advocated the abolition of many, if not all, of the some 40 new emergency agencies set up by the New Deal in the past three years.

His message to General Accounting Office employes was in similar vein.

"While the blind and selfish resistance to law enforcement in connection with the use of public moneys, which was so widely encountered during the organization period of the independent accounting system, has in large measure subsided," McCarl said yesterday, "the efforts appearing now to be directed upon the Congress for broader administrative discretion and wider latitude in the spending of public moneys—and, unfortunately, they have been meeting with considerable success—when the time comes, as it must, that a Congress will determine to resist such importunings and resume control and direction of the uses of public moneys, it must look to and depend on the independent accounting system as its only means of exacting obedience to its laws.

"Don't fail that Congress. And to that end it is of first importance that you do your full part toward maintaining and safeguarding the independence of the accounting system—independence from both executive branch and partisan political domination—as either would work its utter undoing."

McCarl warned his former staff that they "must expect periods of discouragement, as the forces you must constantly combat are powerful and resourceful." He said, "It may appear at times that even Congress has deserted you, but don't give up—don't even be downhearted, just keep fighting for law observance and honesty in Government."

"Fortunately," he siad, "such dismal periods usually induce beneficial reactions, so always remember that a resolute and purposeful Congress will seriously need an efficiently functioning accounting system."

McCarl paid tribute to the efficiency of his office force, thanked his former subordinates for their support, and said he is confident they will continue to function competently.

CCC Men Serve as 'Test Tubes' To Find Remedy for Meningitis

Medical Association Reports Experiments Made With Vaccine at Missouri Camp Last Year Have Proved Successful.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 1.—A CCC camp in Atchinson County, Mo., tendered science today a possible weapon long shot against disease—a vaccine for prevention of meningitis.

Boys in the camp were human "test tubes" for the first attempt ever made at immunization against the disease during an epidemic.

The experiment begun in 1935 was declared a success today by Dr. Dwight M. Kuhns, of Fort Leavenworth, Kans., captain of the Medical Corps in the Seventh Corps Area research board of the United States Army.

All of 395 vaccinated persons—some in the Missouri camp, some in another CCC camp at Burlington, Kans., and some school children—escaped the disease, although other cases developed around them, Capt. Kuhns reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Similar success was obtained, he declared, in three other epidemics.

Cautioning against too enthusiastic a reception for the vaccine with the warning: "This is only a preliminary report and * * * to prove the value * * * of the immunizing agent it should be used in a large number of beginning epidemics." The doctor reviewed the experiment thus:

An epidemic of meningitis—a malady which inflames the membranes covering the brain and spinal cord and causes chills, fever, vomiting, delirium, nervous twitches and paralysis in company with a body rash—broke out in Camp Crystal, a CCC unit near the town of Tarkio, Mo., in the spring of 1935.

All known methods of prevention and control, including isolation of patients and carriers and use of serum to combat the disease where it had started, were tried, but the epidemic continued. The death rate was 83 per cent outside the camp, and 11 per cent within.

An attempt at immunization was decided on, and vaccine was manufactured by growing meningococci, the meningitis germs, on a medium of veal broth.

After four days, the germs were killed by merthiolate which made the culture in a final concentrate of one part to 10,000. The concentrate was then filtered.

This was used for skin tests of the campers, and where tests were positive inoculations were made in direct ratio to the indicated sensitivity.

The results were so effective that the Tarkio school board asked that children there be inoculated. This was done. Another experiment was carried on during another epidemic which was just starting up at Camp Coffey, CCC unit at Burlington, Kans.

In all cases, Dr. Kuhns reported, the vaccinations turned the skin tests from positive to negative.

Steel Workers' Charges

labor unrest slowly is creeping over the Nation. They included:

1. The National Brotherhood of Operative Potters, meeting in Atlantic City, N. J., indicated they would demand a wage increase in their new contract. This raises threat of a strike in the trouble-ridden Ohio valley which houses both steel and pottery interests.

2. From Birmingham, Ala., came reports that shots were exchanged between deputies of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co., as striking miners continued their month-old hold-out from the iron pitts.

3. The United Textile Workers of America uttered a threat to peace in the spinning industries when the general strike committee met at Providence, R. I., to demand 20 per cent wage increases and a 35 hour week.

4. James F. Dewey, conciliator of the Department of Labor, was sent to Portsmouth, Ohio, to assist in negotiations between striking workers and officials at the Wheeling steel plant. Dewey was sent at the request of union officials.

The heads of the ten big unions affiliated with Lewis will meet in Washington today to plot their campaign in view of the statement by steel operators that they would present a united front against labor's drive to force a "closed shop." On July 10, Lewis and his group will go before the executive committee of the American Federation of Labor in what may develop to be a "finish fight" over the one big union versus craft union issue before all workers today.

Lewis has no intention of complying with a demand by President William Green of the American Federation of Labor that he drop his industrial unionism campaign and work along craft union lines. Green is equally adamant.

The executive board has power to recommend expulsion of the industrial unionists, but experts doubted that it would go to this extreme. Unless peace is restored, it is considered unlikely that the big "war chests" of the federation unions will be made available for the campaign in the steel industry.

Even this contingency has brought no concern to Lewis and his aids. They already have mustered a $500,000 fund to unionize the 500,000 workers in the $5,000,000,000 steel industry.

"We can draw on the resources of the people," Murray said tonight. "We can't approximate the amount of money that the people who are behind this movement are going to have. I think it would be safe to say that money in sufficient quantities will pour into the drive to accomplish our purposes."

Simultaneously it was learned that Lewis probably will call upon the Federal Government to enforce a law enacted by the Seventy-fourth Congress which would prevent transportation of strike breakers from one State to another. Murray said this problem was being watched closely by his group.

"It is common gossip," he said, "that the corporations are setting up veritable arsenals and that they are importing gunmen to protect the properties in threatened strike districts.

Murray reported that the entire organizing campaign, of which steel is merely the principal but most ambitious sector, has now netted 175,000 new advocates of industrial unionism. This has been concentrated among rubber workers, automobile workers, and textile workers, he said. Also, he reported considerable "progress" among the Allied Radio workers and the United Electric workers.

Strikers Riot.

Camden, N. J., July 1 (U.P.).—A score of persons were injured and nine men and four women were arrested late today when strikers clashed with police at the Radio Corporation of America's manufacturing plant after a voice blared from a loud speaker:

"Now is the time to get them—don't let the cops stop you—rush the police—upset their motorcycles—cut the ropes—get the workers."

The fight started just as workers were leaving the plant for the day. Police Chief Arthur Colsey said about 1,000 men and women began throwing eggs, tomatoes, rocks and other missles after the battle order issued from the loud speaker, which was located in a nearby hotel. Three policemen were hurt.

The disorder soon spread over nine blocks. The strikers identified themselves by marking a black cross on their foreheads between the eyes. Shouting and cheering, the strikers threw themselves at the workers, who left the plant without the company guards.

The fighting lasted for 10 minutes. Two girls were knocked down and cut. Two others were chased by 20 pursuers until they ran into a store and hid. Police said the riot was direct violation of their agreement with strikers who promised to stay off sidewalks if company guards remained inside the plant.

Water Famine Feared.

Clarksburg, W. Va., July 1.—Warnings were issued today by the water board that conservation of water may be resorted to soon, if the drought continues. While the four dams in the West Fork River impounds water for a distance of 17 miles, the river is so low that water has ceased to flow over the dams.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

Paul Revere, 1936 Version.

("Americans are confronted by the same problem that faced the Minute Men."—The President.)

Listen, my children, and you shall hear
Of the midnight ride of Paul Revere;
He said to his friend, "If All should march,
Hang a lantern aloft in the belfry arch;
One if by land and two if by sea,
And I on the opposite shore will be Ready to ride and spread the alarm
To every Middlesex district and farm."

* * * *

Meanwhile his friend, through alley and street,
Hears the shouts and the tramp of feet;
Then he climbs the tower of Old North Church
(But not by the wooden stairs; that day
They'd installed a lift through WPA
That frightened the pigeons from their perch).

* * * *

Then he senses a movement far away,
Where the river widens to meet the bay,
Eager, impatient to mount and ride,
Booted and spurred, with a heavy stride,
On the opposite shore walked Paul Revere;
All his horse had to fear was the fear of fear!

* * * *

And lo, as he looks, on the belfry's height,
A glimmer, and then a gleam of light!

* * * *

It was 12 o'clock by the village clock
When he crossed the bridge at Medford town—
A new steel bridge with a marble dock—
Harry Hopkins had torn the old one down!

* * * *

It was 30 minutes after 1
When he galloped into Lexington.
(The roads they were in a frightful fix Through Project Five Thousand and Fifty-six.)

* * * *

It was nearly 5 and his spirits down
When he came to the bridge in Concord town;
Now where the "rude bridge" arched the flood
There wasn't a thing but rocks and mud,
Steam shovels, tools and a hundred men—
'Twas Federal Project Six Thousand and Ten!

* * * *

So through the night rode Paul Revere,
Through roads that were dug up and streets that were new,
From Project Nine Thousand to Ten Thirty-two—
Sometimes on his horse and sometimes on his ear.

* * * *

And everywhere signs, "This Road Under Repair;"
Paul finally made it; we won out, of course;
But, boy, it was certainly tough on his horse!

Success!

Elmer Twitchell found the hitchhiking back from Philadelphia pretty tough going, but he says it was the greatest convention the Society of Flashlight Photographers and Radio Engineers of North America ever held in their history.

Elmer says he couldn't help notice that in the summary of the reasons why the colonists rebelled Mr. Roosevelt carefully refrained from mentioning the paramount cause, high taxation.

Named Rear Admirals

CAPT. WILSON BROWN (top)
CAPT. W. S. ANDERSON.

1,100 Officers Are Promoted In Navy Orders

Admiral Brown, Former Aid to President, Among Those Advanced.

Naval Capts. Wilson Brown, jr., until recently the President's aid; Walter S. Anderson, naval attache to the American Embassy in London, and William P. Roberts, of the Bureau of Construction, have been promoted to the rank of rear admiral, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

Their advancements headed a list of more than 1,100 promotions of naval officers of all ranks that became effective with the start of the new fiscal year.

The transfer of Commander Ellis Stone, secretary of the general board, to the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co. for duty in connection with the fitting out of the heavy cruiser Vincennes, also was announced by the department. The new General Board secretary is to be Commander William R. Purnell.

During the World War, Admiral Brown was in command of the U. S. S. Parker, destroyer based at Queenstown, Ireland, and engaged in convoy duty in the submarine zone. For his service at the time he received the Navy Cross.

Was Aid to Coolidge.

From 1921 to 1925 he was stationed in the office of naval operations in Washington. The following year he was appointed aid to President Coolidge and commanding officer of the Mayflower, continuing in that post until 1929. He was named aid to President Roosevelt in May, 1934, being succeeded recently by Capt. Paul H. Bastedo, who also was formally promoted yesterday.

A year Admiral Brown's junior, Admiral Anderson was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1893, specializing in ordnance. During the World War he served on the Arizona. In 1921 upon completing the course at the Naval War College, he was ordered to command Destroyer Division 34 of the Battle Fleet.

In 1924 he was assigned to the Naval Academy, three years later being appointed assistant chief of staff of the commander in chief of the fleet. While he commanded the West Virginia from January, 1932, until December, 1933, the battleship won the battle efficiency pennant twice.

Admiral Robert joined the construction corps in 1896, two years after his graduation from the Naval Academy.

Specialist in Design.

A specialist in the design and construction of naval ships, he was in charge of warship design in the bureau from 1913 to 1915. He served successively as a member of the Navy's Board of Inspection and Survey at the Philadelphia Navy Yard, in the Bureau of Construction, and as assistant to the chief of the bureau. Last November he was appointed general inspector for the Construction Corps.

Among the others promoted in the higher ranks are the following officers who live or are stationed in the District. From commander to captain, Walter K. Kilpatrick, Howard H. Crosby, James M. Irish, Arthus S. Carpender, William D. Brereton, William E. Monroe, Albert M. Penn, Charles M. Yates, John R. Beardall and Willis A. Lee, jr.

Phillips Clears Desk for Call To Post in Rome

Career Diplomat's Name Sent to Italy for Approval as Envoy.

By the Associated Press.

William Phillips, Undersecretary of State and ace career diplomat, yesterday began clearing his desk preparatory to departing for Rome, where he will serve as American Ambassador to Italy.

While President Roosevelt has withheld official announcement of Phillips' appointment, it was learned authoritatively that his name had been forwarded to the Italian foreign office. A formal acceptance of his appointment is expected today or tomorrow.

A number of visitors, including several foreign diplomats, were among the Undersecretary's callers yesterday, congratulating him on his appointment.

Career Started in 1903.

Speculation was widespread concerning a successor to Phillips, who, starting in 1903, has climbed up through the diplomatic ranks to serve as Minister to Canada and the Netherlands, Ambassador to Belgium and Undersecretary of State under both Republican and Democratic Administrations.

Among those most prominently mentioned were Norman H. Davis and Sumner Wells, assistant secretary in charge of Latin-American affairs.

Davis is a veteran diplomat who has served as Undersecretary of State and the Treasury and has acted as the President's "roving ambassador" abroad.

Welles, who has a distinguished record that includes service as Ambassador to Cuba, has been mentioned frequently as a logical successor to Phillips from within the career service. Assistant Secretaries Sayre and Moore also are eligible for promotion to Undersecretary.

His Task Difficult.

Phillips, who was known to desire active field service, would replace Breckinridge Long, who resigned because of ill health. His would be the concededly difficult task of readjusting American-Italian relations, a task studded with problems arising from the recently lifted embargo on war supplies to Italy, the status of Ethiopia, and Italy's new place in the European scheme.

Friends here have emphasized that Phillips would not go to Rome as a temporary "trouble-shooter," but as a full-time envoy.

President Roosevelt and Phillips were members of President Wilson's "Little Cabinet" as Assistant Secretaries, and their friendship began there. The President recalled Phillips to active duty as Undersecretary when he assumed office in March, 1933.

Phillips' most recent assignment abroad was as the President's representative at the London Naval Conference.

Ambassador Long, who is recuperating at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., is expected to leave soon for his summer home at Nantucket, Mass., and may take an active partin the fall campaign.

Moley Sees Upturn For Conservatives

Boston, July 1 (AP).—Raymond Moley, former Presidential brain-truster, speaking here at the annual convention of the Advertising Federation of America, today declared it "significant" that the word "conservative" is "coming back into the realm of respectability."

Bruce Barton, advertising man, prophesied "much reorganization of boards of directors," with a time coming when industrial concerns would have on their boards "one or more representatives of the public."

Moley declared he saw a newer trend in public opinion, "a definitely rising tide of moderation."

He described a poll taken a few months ago, which revealed, he said, "the Middle West voted positively conservative * * * three-fifths of the States voted conservative. The small towns voted conservative. Only those on relief * * * voted liberal."

It does not follow, he said, that a man is conservative simply because he likes to think he is, "but the mere fact that people generally are now thinking that they are conservative is extremely significant."

Educators Score Curb on Teachers

Portland, Oreg., July 1 (AP).—The National Education Association assailed academic restrictions today with a rousing vote, deplored the discharge of teachers and recommended annual Federal appropriations for the schools.

"Teachers should be accorded the full right of all citizens to express publicly their views * * * and ally themselves with organizations of their own choosing," said the enthusiastically approved report of the academic freedom committee.

The committee also recommended the seeking of "public support for the right to academic freedom," and asserted it would assist teachers "deprived of their positions in violation of the National Education Association principle."

Sharp criticism of the District of Columbia restriction against the teaching of communism in the public schools was voiced by speakers.

New Film Plays Promise a Week Of Varied Bills

Romance, Mystery and Fun Mark Both First Runs and Repeaters.

Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray, the popular costars of "Hands Across the Table," again appear opposite each other in "The Princess Comes Across," the new Paramount screen comedy which comes to the Earle Theater tomorrow as chief film feature of the bill for the new week. The story is one of romance and mystery in which Miss Lombard, as an American girl from Brooklyn, poses as a Swedish princess in order to catch the attention of Hollywood. MacMurray is cast as a band leader with an eye for blondes. On the stage, the Earle will feature the radio stars of Captain Henry's Showboat—Louise Massey and the Westerners. Other acts will be presented by Harris, Claire and Shannon, with Duke McHale; Steve Evans in "Hollywood Snapshots," and Prosper and Marat in "Athletic Rhythm."

"The Crime of Dr. Forbes," to be presented as chief screen feature for the new week at Loew's Fox Theater beginning tomorrow, is said to provide a problem that even the most astute mystery-solver will find difficulty in unraveling. Gloria Stuart, Robert Kent and Henry Armetta are the foremost members of a cast that also includes Alan Dinehart, Sara Haden and others of note. There have been rumors that this subject deals veiledly with the matter of "mercy killings." On the Fox stage, the entertainment will be afforded by Ozzie Nelson and his orchestra, assisted by Harriet Hilliard, remembered for her screen work with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in "Follow the Fleet." Other specialists of versatile attainments add their individual contributions to a spirited revue.

After six weeks of "Show Boat," which ends its run tonight, RKO-Keith's will present as its new feature, for the week beginning tomorrow, a comedy-romance bearing the title of "The Bride Walks Out." The stellar role is played by Barbara Stanwyck, supported by two competent leading men in the persons of Robert Young and Gene Raymond. A strong comedy note is struck by Helen Broderick and that dead-pan comic, Ned Sparks, who hasn't been around much of late. The story is described as "a marital adventure on the installment plan." The bill, as usual, will be augmented by short-reel subjects of varied interest and a new release of the Pathe News.

Robert Taylor and Loretta Young in "Private Number," their first costarring vehicle, will continue for a second week at Loew's Palace Theater, where they have scored an unequivocal hit with the romantically inclined. The basis of the play's action rests in the marriage of a rich young man to a maid in his aristocratic mother's service. Basil Rathbone and Patsy Kelly are among the foremost of the supporting players. The auxiliary attractions also will be held over.

"Fury," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's vigorous screen treatise upon the manifold evils of lynch law and mob rule, will renew its F street popularity by occupying the screen of Loew's Columbia Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. Spencer Tracy and Sylvia Sidney are the costellar players in this gripping and useful entertainment, which reaches heights of melodramatic interest that seldom have been equaled. Walter Abel, Bruce Cabot, Robert Ellis, Walter Brennan, Frank Albertson and George Walcott lead the support. The feature will be augmented by selected short-reel subjects.

Tricked out with a new happy ending that leaves an audience in a much pleasanter frame of mind than the one recently seen at the Earle, "Hearts Divided" tomorrow will return to a downtown screen at the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater for a week's run. In this romance of Betsy Patterson, of Baltimore, and Jerome Bonaparte, brother of the emperor, the pivotal roles are played by Marion Davies and Dick Powell, with Claude Rains in the role of Napoleon. Short subjects and a full newsreel will be added.

The Little Theater has arranged a bill of strong contrasts for the week beginning next Sunday by booking as companion attractions "If I Had a Million," in which Charles Laughton lends dignity and distinction to that questionable salute known colloquially as "the bird," and "Man of Aran," an authentic and grimly beautiful film depicting the struggles of the inhabitants of the west coast of Ireland to wrest a livelihood from the sea.

The Crystal Pool, drive-'em-yourself motor boats, Spanish Garden Ballroom, Midway, merry-go-round and a variety of thrilling rides are only a few of the more than 50 amusements that attract crowds day after day and night after night to Glen Echo Park, Washington's foremost, free-admission amusement center. With summer in full swing, the ample picnic groves are not the least of the park's attractions.

About The Showshops

BELL.

AMONG the day's ruminations it might be recorded that a week from tomorrow, Friday, July 10, when Harriet Hoctor comes to town to headline the stage bill at the Earle Theater, an added feature of the living entertainment will be Jean Sargent, popular singer of both stage and radio, who stepped from the ranks of Philadelphia's younger socialites into the cast of Irving Berlin's "Face the Music" and since then has been both seen and heard in "Flying Colors" and the "Ziegfeld Follies." It is promised that when she appears here week after next, Miss Sargent will regale the pewholders with a repertoire of distinctive interpretations of new numbers, written especially for her use.

Since the matter has come up, there is no team on the boards or in the flickers who are able to present such an unbroken array of exclusive song material as The Yacht Club Boys, currently wowing the customers at the Earle and piling them up neatly in the aisles. Something was said in this space yesterday about Billy Mann, George Kelly, Charlie Adler and Jimmy Kern being swell Yachters, or words to that general effect, but in that we plead guilty to gross understatement. We didn't know the half of it.

Having spent three or four or five or six hours at their Tuesday night soiree in Suite 505 in the Washington, I now am prepared to say that here is one of the most versatile, most dynamic and most indefatigably hilarious foursomes contemporaneously loose in a high-pressure world. You only get a small fraction of this quartet's amazing capabilities as four-ply entertainers from watching them on the stage. A night club would come considerably nearer affording the free rein needed for the best exposition of their free-wheeling talents, but a party at the Washington is better yet! Cutting loose on their own, they work as a perfectly co-ordinated quad and then split up into individual units, each with its own style and grist of "torch" songs, wisecracks, "gags" and ad libbing. And as each does his stuff, all of the others make it as tough for him as possible—which is plenty tough.

By now, you know all about how the four of them got together, what a smash they are in New York and how they are lionized in London, but until you have heard them cut loose intimately in "The Great American Tourist," "The Nudist Colony" number, the one about "The Most Amazing Mr. Green" and the "Whoo-hoo" thing, relating in what manner Josephine aided Napoleon in achieving greatness, you practically ain't heard nothin'!

I hereby start a round-robin petitioning that George and Billy and Charlie and Jimmy—not forgetting Benny Kendall, the human repository of every piano score ever written, in any key you like—be held a second week at the Earle. Or, failing that, that they be brought back week after next for a run of six or seven months!

But don't ask me to intetview them. You might as well try to interview four leaping impalias, in full cry. It would be interesting to knock these fellows apart some time, just to see what keeps them going!

* * * *

I pass along to those concerned, the text of a note received in the morning's mail from Miss Frances H. Rees, 1601 Argonne place, which is worthy of serious managerial consideration:

"My dear Mr. Bell: I have recently read in your column (which, incidentally, I always enjoy), of the proposed construction of several new theaters in Washington. Might I suggest that it would be a great added attraction to a large number of people if these theaters were to install earphones in some of the seats for the benefit of the hard of hearing. I know of only two theaters in Washington so equipped and can assert from my own experience that if the other principal theaters would follow suit, it would be a boon to their patrons thus afflicted. Yours sincerely (Signed) FRANCES H. REES."

To Miss Rees, my thanks for her parenthetical comment, and to the Warner Brothers, the Tans-Lux Co., et al., the suggestion that her view is that of a greater number of regular theater patrons than most of us realize.

Farley, and Mrs. Latimer; Senator and Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis; Commissioner and Mrs. Eugene O. Sykes, the Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, Maj. Bernard R. Bette Davis in Contract Tilt With Warners Academy Award Winner to Quit Films If Demands Not Met, She Says.

Hollywood, July 1 (AP).—Sharp-spoken Bette Davis, holder of the current academy award as the screen's finest actress, brought her contract wars with Warner Brothers to a sudden climax today with this crisp ultimatum—"I'm ready to quit for good."

"There are certain things I'm entitled to," said the blonde star who disclosed she had refused to report for work on a current picture, "and I'm darned well going to get them—or else!"

Miss Davis, who won the academy award for her performance in "Dangerous" last year, said she would go to court, as did James Cagney several months ago, if she feels circumstances warrant such a move.

Her salary, reported to be $2,000 a week, is not the only difficulty, she said.

"It's a mess of little things that need adjustment. They've been wrong for a long time. I'd rather not go into detail just now. If the situation can't be straightened out, I'm ready to quit the screen for good. I won't go back to work as things stand."

"Not Serious" Say Execs.

Studio executives refused to regard the situation as serious.

"It's all being fixed up amicably," one said. "Nothing serious at all. She'll be back."

Miss Davis said she presented her demand for a new contract last February 1. A month later, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences awarded her the gold statuette for the best performance by an actress in 1935.

"But the fact that I asked for a new deal before the awards were announced proves that the one thing had nothing to do with the other," she said.

Her agent said her contract has five years to run.

Last March, after a bitter court fight, Warners lost James Cagney, one of its top-flight stars, who was rated by exhibitors as one of the 10 biggest box-office players in the business. Cagney complained his contract had been violated, and won the right to break it.

New Bureau Hunts Abductor of Child

Swinging into action the first day after its creation, the new Bureau of Public Relations in the Police Department sought a colored man for abducting a 10-year-old co'ored child.

The man was traced to Philadelphia, and Lieut. Horace W. Lineburg, head of the squad working under Chief of Detectives Bernard W. Thompson, wired that city to arrest the man.

The new squad, which is a combined Bureau of Missing Persons and Public Relations, includes Policemen John Apostilides, A. E. Fredette, O. S. Hunt, J. O. Patton and S. D. Scott.

The characters of Blackie and Mary are, of course, impersonated by Clark Gable and Jeannette MacDonald, pictured above in the usual direction, in their best bib and tuckers, vintage of 1906.

The Federal Diary

By Betty Read.

Effective yesterday, John P. Yeatman, for 25 years a Government employe, was made chief of the division of reports in the office of the Comptroller of the Currency.

He succeeds Adel M. Stewart, who retired recently after many years in that office. Yeatman, a native of the District of Columbia, entered the office in 1911 as a stenographer and served for some years as secretary to the late Thomas P. Kane, Deputy Comptroller. He was then made assistant chief of examinations, which has recently changed its name to the division of reports.

The office handles the reports that come in on national banks from all over the country.

Col. Charles E. Stewart, who on Tuesday was sworn in as clerk of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia by Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, has a memento of his 23 years' service in the Attorney General's office. He was presented with a cocktail shaker by his fellow workers before his resignation became effective on July 1.

Col. Stewart held the post of administrative assistant to the Attorney General since the first days of the Wilson Administration.

Bug Spray Problems.

All for one and one for all is the motto of the scientists in the Department of Agriculture, says Dr. C. A. Browne, in charge of chemical research in the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils. In other words, it takes a lot of different kinds of scientists co-operating to push through a project, a fact that is not generally known, as the credit for each completed piece of work goes to one distinct office. As an example of what he meant, Dr. Browne said that some of the most highly trained Government scientists are at present engaged in synthesizing new chemical compounds for killing injurious insects.

"But when a new apple spray is discovered, for instance, he said, "it must first be tested upon the right insects by entomologists. If the results are favorable they must then be examined by plant physiologists to see if it is harmless to the foliage and blossoms of the trees and so on and on through many stages."

Other kinds of scientists, co-operating with the bureau include apiarists, who determine whether the new insecticide is harmless to bees; pharmacologists, who examine the residues of the compound left on the apples to tell their effect upon the health of the customer; a soil chemist, whose job is to say what happens to the soil where the spray falls and five or six others.

Hoover on Crime.

That master sleuth, John Edgar Hoover, formally known as the director of the Bureau of Investigation, has things on his mind these days about politics versus law enforcement.

In the current issue of the F. B. I. Law Enforcement Bulletin the foreword is noteworthy: "If we are to continue to progress in effective law enforcement, too much emphasis cannot be laid upon certain features of police organization," he writes.

"I believe there should be a responsible, well-trained head of the police force, one not encumbered by political dictates. It should be recognized, and I feel this to be extremely vital, that the leadership of a police organization is a task requiring training and experience with a good man continuing in office so long as he produces the proper results, regardless of changes in administrations.

"We might take a lesson from European police organizations, where the head of the police is a position of prominence and dignity, unaffected by political change, a career attracting the best talents of the universities and Government services.

"The public is demanding efficiency in its law enforcement agencies. This can be effected by raising the level of law enforcement above the encroachments of political influence. It has been done with our educational system, it can be done with our Nation's police forces."

It is Hoover who brings out the figures that 150,000 murderers are roaming at large and that 200,000 people will commit murder and 300,000 will be murdered during this lifetime.

Miss Gunderson Elected.

Ada Gunderson of the National Labor Relations Board was re-elected president of the Recreation Association of the board at its recent voting for new officers. She was the first president of the newly formed association and will continue to guide its activities. Other officers elected include Herbert Glaser, vice president; Meta Phillips, secretary, and Ben Frank, treasurer.

Last winter the Women's National Democratic Club held classes for the wives of Senators and Congressmen to teach them what the New Deal is doing and the purposes for which its agencies were created.

The loyal wives turned out in great numbers but, in addition, there were a lot of applicants who couldn't be listed as Congressional wives. Most of these people were Government employes and, strangly enough, there were also a number of secretaries to Congressmen and Senators and employes of the New Deal agencies themselves who wanted to know what it was all about.

So free classes are now being started at the All States Hotel by the Democratic Women's National Council under the same instructor, Mrs. Louise Lazell, with preference to be given to Government employes. No, the students don't have to be Democrats and the Democratic ladies are expecting that some of them won't be for they think the open forum after each lecture will be a lively affair.

Arts Club Seeks Chariot For Greek Spectacle

'Phaeton, Son of Phoebus,' to Be Presented By Group Next Thursday; Vehicle Needed to Complete Preparations.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Wanted: A chariot for the sun god.

Thursday night of next week, the Arts Club, of which many prominent Washington residents are active members, will have the first formal dramatic production to be given in the garden back of its clubhouse which was completed last year. It is to be a Greek spectacle, "Phaeton, Son of Phoebus," written by Mrs. Miriam D. Hilton, one of the members, and costumes, music, choruses, dancers, even the white horses and a driver secured from Fort Myer are ready for the performance, but so far no chariot has been found.

Mrs. Maud Howell Smith, chairman of the dramatic committee of the Arts Club, feels sure the gods will smile on the production and from somewhere nearer than New York a chariot will roll in—but from where she does not know. So far she has found none adjacent to the capital.

"Phaeton, Son of Phoebus" will be given July 9 for the club members as a pre-view to be followed on July 10 by its presentation in the Sylvan Theater as the Arts Club's contribution to the summer program of the Community Center. Mrs. Marie Moore Forrest, who is a member of the board of directors of the Community Center and also of the dramatic committee of the club, is directing the cast of more than 100.

Prize Winner.

The production, which she describes as a Greek spectacle with a story theme running through it, rather than a drama, was one of those selected last year as a prize winner in the contest for a play suitable to be produced in the new garden, with its outdoor stage and accommodations for an audience of 150 persons.

It was impracticable to give a production so late in the season last year and nothing was done until this summer when Mrs. Forrest and Mrs. Maud Howell Smith, chairman of the dramatic committee of the Arts Club, conceived the plan of giving a pre-view for club members, followed by the Sylvan Theater performance.

Music for the spectacle has been arranged by Mr. Walter Studdiford, of the club, with the assistance of Capt. Taylor Bronson, conductor of the Marine band, which will play for the Sylvan Theater presentation. Mr. Studdiford, unable to find a musical theme suitable for a certain dramatic scene, has written one, "Phaeton's Call to the Sun God," which is descriptive in character.

Mrs. Hilton, who is chairman of the music committee of the Arts Club, an active member of the Friday Morning Club and prominent in musical circles of the Capital, had originally planned simple music in keeping with the early Greek theme of the play. When production on a larger scale was planned, however, with the Marine Band assisting, it was necessary to select compositions for which band arrangements were available.

Also assisting the Arts Club members will be a chorus, the nucleus of which is formed by a group from George Washington University, and a group of the Marion Chace dancers. Mr. Michael Logan will have the role of Mars in the war dance.

Paris Listed.

Among the other characters in Greek mythology introduced will be Juno, portrayed by Mrs. Robert Patterson; Jupiter, by Mr. Maurice Jarvis; Phoebus, by Mrs. Maud Howell Smith, who long has been identified with the little theater movement in Washington, and Venus, by Miss Adele Whiteside, who was selected for the part because of her unusual beauty.

Miss Nancy Ordway, granddaughter of the late Gen. Ordway, will represent Earth. Mrs. Robert LeFevre, will have the part of the Year and her daughters, Miss Mildred LeFevre of the Month and Miss LeFevre, of the Day. Arts Club members who have seen the rehearsals have commented on the fact that mother and daughters look so near of an age, the Year seems little older than the Month and the Day.

The Arts Club is one of the few groups in the capital which continues its activities through the summer season. Every Tuesday and Thursday night there is an informal dinner followed by a program. On fair evenings the dinner is served in the garden where tables are arranged. Tuesday of this week Miss Judith Lyeth presented a dance program, assisted by Mr. George Edwards, barytone, and Mr. James McLean, accompanist.

Various sections of the club, devoted to drama, literature, music or the dance, arrange the programs and the host and hostess for the dinner preceding, usually are from those groups.

Historic Place.

The clubhouse is one of the historic places of Washington. It was used as Executive Mansion for the period between President Monroe's inauguration in March, 1817, and his departure on a tour of the United States. Many notable men have lived and entertained there, including Gideon Granger, Postmaster General; James Monroe, while Secretary of State and also Secretary of War in President Madison's Cabinet. It was also used as the British Legation in 1820.

One of the traditions, which clings to the historic building, is that during the disastrous battle of Bladensburg on August 24, 1814, a conference was being held between President Madison and his cabinet when the swift approach of British troops broke up the meeting. Madison was forced to flee and galloped on horseback through the halls of the house to escape capture.

The house adjoining also was bought by the Arts Club a few years ago and has been converted into an auditorium.

Mr. Lewis Lofton Moneyway is president for the coming year; Mr. Frank B. Steele, vice president; Mr. Charles H. Stratton, corresponding secretary; Mr. William J. McManus, recording secretary, and Mr. Albert W. Stahl, treasurer.

Mr. Charles Bittinger, Mr. Harold Allen Long, Mr. William Malcolm Corse, Mr. Edwin H. Etz and Mr. Lewis comprise the other members of the Board of Governors.

Among the prominent members of the club are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bittinger, Mrs. Bessie Edson, Mr. John Paul Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. George Hewitt Myers, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edward Russell, Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde B. Aitchison, Miss Rose Greely, Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Coville, Mr. and Mrs. A. Blair Thaw, Mrs. Consuelo Seoane, Mr. Clifford Berryman, Mr. George Rothwell Brown, Dr. Hans Kindler, who lives at the club while he is in Washington, Mrs. Avery Coonley and Dr. DeWitt C. Croissant.

Washington Scene

By the Poe Sisters.

Two young people, once well known among the very young set of Washington, were married last week in St. Louis. They are Mr. and Mrs. Howard Williams. Mrs. Williams is the former Miss Jane Perry Francis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Talton T. Francis and granddaughter of the late David R. Francis, Governor of his State and later United States Ambassador to Russia. Mr. Williams is a son of the former United States Senator from Missouri, Judge George H. Williams.

The bride is a leader in the Junior League in St. Louis, and often has visited Washington in recent years in connection with her interest in this activity. Several years ago she was given the notable social honor in St. Louis of being appointed the Veiled Prophet Queen.

At her wedding Miss Francis wore the bridal robe of her sister, Mrs. E. Lansing Ray, jr., formerly Miss Marian Francis, whose marriage was a June event a year ago. This wedding gown deserves more than passing mention. It was made on empire lines with a train 4 yards in length, and rare Brussels lace, the gift of the bridegroom's mother, was used at the top of the bodice. The sleeves of the gown were long and pointed. The tulle veil was gathered to the back of the head and held in place by a coronet of Brussels lace.

Mrs. Helena Mitchell McAvoy, a former resident of Washington, who is sure to be about where political tempests are brewing, visited the Capital en route to her home in Nome, Alaska, from the Philadelphia convention. Mrs. McAvoy is a well known woman writer of the North, where she has been living for 18 years.

It is said she made the first speech for woman suffrage in Alaska. Mrs. McAvoy once campaigned for William Jennings Bryan, in 1896—and was known as the "16-to-one" lady because of her staunch advocacy of that monetary policy.

Former Senator and Mrs Truman H. Newberry, of Michigan, and Mr. Newberry's brother-in-law and sister, Col. and Mrs. Henry B. Joy, have gone to their summer home at Watch Hill.

Before leaving Detroit, the families attended the unveiling of a tablet memorializing the romantic history of the U. S. S. Yantic which carried the flower of Detroit manhood to sea in 1898, with the United States Naval Reserve.

Senator Newberry was an officer on the Yantic at that time. His granddaughter, Christina Newberry, assisted by John Lyster Bridhead, son of Commander Bridhead, pulled the ribbons which revealed the tablet imbedded in the anchor of the old ship, now resting on the broad lawn of the Naval Armory.

The Newberrys had their home at Massachusetts avenue and Twentieth street during part of their Washington stay and it was a rendezvous for a group of official folk. During the World War, Mrs. Henry B. Joy, sister of Senator Newberry, spent much time in Washington in war service work in connection with the activities of the Woman's Naval Service.

She was adjutant and inspector of the National Service School at Chevy Chase, a training camp attended by women and girls of prominence during World War days to prepare them for service at home and overseas. After she returned to Detroit, Mrs. Joy started the first center there for the preparation of women to act as volunteers in occupational therapy work among wounded veterans.

Mr. and Mrs. Crane will go to St. Moritz for the winter sports, and will return to their home in Chicago in January.

Mrs. Crane recently returned to the United States on the Bremen to visit her parents, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Clark Howell Woodward, of Coronado, Calif. Admiral and Mrs. Woodward are recently of Washington, where they were stationed for a number of years, until he was placed in charge of the West Coast destroyers.

Pan American Union Concert Slated Tonight

Rosalmira Colomo, Christine Stewart are Guest Artists.

Those in charge of the concerts on the esplanade at the Pan American Union are watching the sky and the thermometer today, apprehensive that the weather may play again tonight such tricks as it did on May 28, when the first of the summer programs was given.

Despite the fact the calendar has turned its pages from May to July, the threat of chilly weather again suggests the need for warm wraps for the guests tonight.

Those who attended the concert in May smiled at each other and at themselves as they appeared in fur coats and overcoats, collars of which were turned up for extra warmth as the evening progressed. The night was clear, but cold. Those who shivered a bit in their summer dress last night and contemplated tonight's outdoor concert, thought first of the evening wraps they would wear and then of the gowns to be worn under them.

The program tonight will be presented by the United States Army Band, with Rosalmira Colomo, Mexican contralto, and Christine Stewart, who will present Latin-American dances, as guest artists.

Louis Finegan, Miss Kline Wed

Breakfast at the Shoreham Follows Ceremonies at Church.

Miss Catherine E. Kline, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kline, was married at 8 o'clock this morning to Mr. Louis L. Finegan, of Washington, son of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Finegan, of Richmond. The ceremony took place at the Holy Trinity Church, the Rev. Andrew Graves officiating, and was followed by a breakfast at the Shoreham Hotel.

The bride wore a gown of white marquisette with a picture hat to match. The maid of honor, Miss Margaret Kline, the bride's sister, wore a frock of yellow mousseline de soie and carried roses.

Miss Ann Mannix, the only bridesmaid, wore a green mousseline de soie and carried a bouquet of roses.

Mr. Edward Finegan was his brother's best man. The ushers were Mr. James George and Mr. John Fantine.

After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Finegan will reside in Washington.

Margaret Germond Is Honored By Club

Miss Margaret Germond was the honor guest at a buffet supper last evening at the Newspaper Women's Club, given by a small group of her newspaper associates.

Mr. Gideon A. Lyon in behalf of the co-hosts and hostesses presented Miss Germond with a watch as a gift in observance of the anniversary of her connection with newspaper work. The party was a complete surprise to the honor guest, who is treasurer of the Newspaper Women's Club. For some years Miss Germond was editor of Let's Go the official magazine of the Virginia Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, and later served as vice president of the State organization.

Puerto Rican Women, Given Vote, Content

But They Fail to Make the Most of It, Says Island Educator.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

"WHAT WOMEN of my country wanted was the vote. Now that they have it, they are content. As a whole, they are sitting back satisfied; they are not using suffrage to gain other rights and privileges."

These might have been the words of an American woman; but instead, they came from the lips of a charming Latin lady, Senorita Teresa Amadeo, faculty member of the University of Puerto Rico, who has been active in the women's movement on her native island, and who today looks forward to the time when women there will realize the importance of the ballot and of organization, as American women have.

Won Vote Four Years Ago.

"For four years now we have been allowed to go to the polls," she said yesterday at headquarters of the National Woman's Party, shortly before she left for New York, where she will attend the summer session of Columbia University. "During those four years," she went on, "I have observed a falling off of feminine interest in public affairs. While many of our women vote, and vote intelligently, they are not particularly interested in participating actively in public life. Most of them are content to let men hold offices and positions they have always held."

She pointed out, however, that a small proportion of Puerto Rican women are becoming established in public life. "In San Juan, today, a woman is working for appointment as city manager," she said. "We have numbers of feminine doctors, lawyers and pharmacists throughout the country. But the majority of our working women are still teachers, clerks and industrial employes. Our traditions are strong; the average woman who seeks employment outside the home has few fields open to her."

Senorita Amadeo became interested in the women's movement in 1918 when she was attending Columbia University. A year later she returned to Puerto Rico, a full-fledged feminist and became an active worker in the suffragist group in San Juan.

Fail to Make Most of It.

"We were interested not only in winning the vote, but in encouraging women to become educated to vote intelligently. By the time we won suffrage, we were prepared for it; but we have failed, as a whole, to make the most of it. Our status is the same today as it was four years ago when the first woman cast her first ballot."

"She expressed the opinion that if American women should achieve equal rights "in practice as well as in theory," Puerto Rican women would try to achieve as much. "As it is today," she went on, "many of our women feel that they have the same rights and privileges as their sisters in America; and that is the height of their ambition."

Finds Feminine Apathy in Politics

Now that the women of Puerto Rico have the ballot, they are not interested in using it, reports Senorita Teresa Amadeo, feminist leader and educator.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

Her house is as modern as the next day. But in the midst of all her very ultra ultra new-fangled furniture she has some old pieces from home that she'd like to keep for sentiment as much as anything. And then they do have a certain homely placid charm. She has been wondering if she might not use them in an upstairs bedroom that she's planning to fix up as a spare room. The pieces she wants to make use of include a walnut chest of drawers, the rocker, a mirror that's quite large and stands on a basis of its own on the floor, a small bedside table and a wood bed of walnut, quite old-fashioned. A very conglomerated collection . . . is there any hope, she wails. She can't spend much.

Certainly, say we. The main thing though is to emphasize the mood of the furniture rather than try to disguise it. Make it as quaint a room as possible . . . then the odds and ends will look as though they had been collected specially to go there. First of all a matting floor . . . then an old-time wall paper with a dark red ground and rather violent looking flowers in it. White lace curtains of course and a candlewick spread of white tufting on white over a dark red petticoat flounce. The dressing table might have a white lace curtain flounce petticoat . . . or have dark red with a candlewick band around the top finished with white fringe. And try to dig up an old piano stool to use for a dressing table bench! Make cushions for the rocker and the side chairs of a big patterned cretonne of red roses on a light ground. Add a picture or two in wide gold frames and the lamps with flower designs on bases or shades.

Send a stamped envelope for Miss Boykin's new bulletin "Pattern for A Child's Room." It includes samples of colors for rug, walls and chairs along with a sketch for the window treatment and patterns for two quilts, one for a boy and one for a girl.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Should Man Let Girl Who Loves Him Finance His Education; Not Sure He Wants to Marry Her.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I came to Washington two years ago to take a Government job, thereby killing several birds with one stone. I was without funds at the time to finish my college course; my family were not in a position to help out; I wanted to get away from a small town, and also, I wanted to get away from a girl I had been going with who was undoubtedly trying to marry me. She is a nice girl; her family is wealthy and influential in fact, but I didn't want to marry anybody for a few years yet, and her least of all. (So I thought.)

* * * *

After coming on here, I wrote to her occasionally—or rather, she wrote to me and I replied occasionally—but I didn't go home on visits, in spite of repeated urgings from her and from my parents. I was making pretty good money and I guess my new freedom went to my head. I got to drinking too much and letting my work slip. Anyway, the axe fell and four weeks ago I found myself out of a job. I tried to make another connection, but my money soon ran out (what little savings I had) and my friends began to avoid me, after a few well-meant efforts to help me get on my feet again.

* * * *

I have moved twice since I lost my job, and three evening ago I came home footsore and dejected from a day's job hunting to my humble quarters there to find the old girl friend waiting for me! She had come on here to visit relatives in Virginia, and by checking with my office and at the home address I had given in my letters, had learned that I had lost my job and also had managed to find where I had moved to. Well, she took charge of me in a big way.

* * * *

She said what happened didn't make any difference to her; that she loved me; wanted me to come back home and finish my schooling and settle down to common sense living. The implication, of course, is that I am to marry her. She insists that she will get her father to lend me the money to go on with my education and that I make the return journey on the same train with her, and she will buy the ticket.

* * * *

Now, I don't know whether it's because I am so down and out that I would clutch at a straw, or what, but just now I find myself thinking I am head over heels in love with her. And if I am in love with her, would I be justified in accepting her offer? It is very probable I would have gone home in another week or two anyway, if I hadn't found a job, which isn't likely. I had been thinking of it, but hating to write telling my folks the truth and asking for the money to come home on. Also, if I do go home, there isn't much help I can expect from my parents. I would only be a drain on them.

* * * *

What do you make of this muddle? Is this girl's offer my big chance? Would I be a fool to turn it down? Or a skunk to except it? If I could finish my education along the line I had planned, I could really go places, I believe. But if I did it on this girl's money, it would mean I would have to marry her, wouldn't it? And what if I found myself rebelling against marriage to her once I had my sheepskin in hand? These and similar questions have been chasing around in my head the past two days until I am getting so I can't think straight. Meantime, the girl is waiting for me to make up my mind. She has gone back down in Virginia, to remain over the Fourth of July, and she expects to start home the sixth. I know you must get dozens of letters every day, but please give this immediate consideration and answer promptly, won't you. PRESENT FAILURE.

* * * *

Don't Act Hastily.

DEAR PRESENT FAILURE: My advice to you is to pocket your pride and let your family finance your trip home. As a self-protective measure, be very sure of your motives and your emotions before accepting help from the girl. It is rather to be expected that you might fancy yourself in love with her at the moment, in view of her generous offer made at a time when you are cut off from friendships, security and hope. But your reaction to her offer may be very different once you get back to the sheltering arms of your family.

* * * *

If it should happen that you are deeply in love with her at last, no harm will be done in letting her help you get on your feet, for you have a lifetime ahead in which to repay the debt a hundredfold. But if you should learn eventually that you had mistaken gratitude for love in this present crisis, the humiliation of that mistake will cast its shadow over both your lives for years to come.

* * * *

Don't dramatize the situation unduly. Don't deal in such purple words as "fool" and "skunk." And investigate your mental processes very carefully in order to discover whence rises that dubious question of yours: ". . . it would mean I would have to marry her, wouldn't it?" That sounds very much like your subconscious is already kicking back at the mere hypothetical notion of entering into a lifetime contract with the girl.

* * * *

Therefore, to sum up my advice: raise your own funds to get home, enlisting your family's sympathy if necessary; think the girl's proposition over very carefully and take plenty of time to decide whether or not you love her enough to be her lifetime debtor. If I were you, I believe I would drop a note into the first mail, telling the girl you will see her at home when she returns; that you appreciate the kindness of heart which dictated her recent offer of help; but that you must ask for more time in which to get your bearings in regard to the whole situation. This is a problem which time and your own common sense will best solve. No third person can jump in here and hand down resounding omniscient decisions. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Confine Child A Short Time As Punishment

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

PSYCHOLOGISTS have long noted the different kinds of time. There is time which passes quickly because it is full of pleasant occupations. There is time which passes slowly because it is empty, or filled with boring duties. There are as many kinds of time as there are people and occupations. But no time is longer than empty time to a child with little experience and not even a watch to tell off the passing minutes and hours.

Too often parents forget the variable qualities of time. They measure by a watch, and a watch only tells time mechanically, it does not measure it relatively.

John has been sent to his room for the afternoon as a punishment for some naughtiness. John is four. To him the hours of his confinement stretch into infinity. His parents are kind people. They shudder at the thought of years of solitary confinement or of life imprisonment for public enemies. It does not occur to them that they are actually inflicting a comparable cruelty on their son.

Penalties cannot be measured by a clock nor by a calendar. Ten minutes of quiet thought on a chair, half an hour of seclusion from the crowd, probably will do much more good than an hour or a day. For, when the punishment has lasted too long, the child almost invariably begins to feel resentful.

He is very apt to turn his mind on thoughts of revenge, and to occupy the eternity of his confinement with plans for geeting even, with his tyrants. When he is released, he is not reformed, but, like so many of the products of houses of correction, has become a public enemy with his hand against the world.

U. S. Influencing British Fashions

London, (AP) (By Mail).—The influence of American fashions on women's clothes has become so marked in England that the leading shops here now are sending corps of buyers regularly to New York and importations of American products are steadily mounting.

It used to be "the latest thing from Paris" or "the latest from Vienna" when customers wandered into the expensively carpeted interiors of London's fashionable fashion shops.

Now the clerks can be heard assuring a customer that the garment at hand is "the very latest from America."

For, while Paris designers frown their displeasure, and while London creators try to apear unconcerned, American styles are being credited with a growing influence on fashions.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Old age creeps upon us imperceptibly. It is like the period of twilight that follows the setting of the sun. But what a grand opportunity it offers of seeing the stars that are invisible by day.

We need not look upon old age as a disagreeable period of life—one associated with infirmities and blessed (?) with suffering. We can equip ourselves for the later decades just as we prepare for youth and the years of our greatest productivity. Every one should be anxious to avoid or reduce to a minimum the period of decrepitude. But it will require the observance of a few simple rules of health.

Long before the retiring period has thrust itself upon the scene, preparation should have been made. We must ask the question, "What activity may I engage in that will bring joy and satisfaction to me and at the same time be of service to others?" Whatever the decision, it should be in agreement with the powers of the individual and his natural bent. No task requiring great mental strain should be undertaken. Details should be carried by others and pressure of accomplishment should never be permitted.

More than 25 centuries ago Hippocrates, the great Greek physician, enunciated the doctrine that elderly persons should not be too strictly confined to a rigid diet.

Regardless of its nutritive qualities, if one food is preferred over another, let that be the article of choice. Few individuals will go wrong. If diet is so monotonous that it cannot be consumed with zest it will cease to be adequate. Most persons will desire fresh fruits, green vegetables, and the requisite amount of protein (meat).

As age advances more sleep is required and there is no substitute as a restorer of vital energy. Sleeplessness, on the other hand, is one of the penalties of narrowed arteries, a weakened heart muscle, hence poor circulation. A nap in the middle of the day is often a necessary part of the program. A 15-minute walk before bedtime, a hot bath, a glass of warm milk, or even a mild sedative may be helpful.

And Call It Accident

By Mrs. Belloc Lowndes

Chapter XXI.

RUTH STILL FELT a little afraid of Lady Cicester, but today the old woman showed her a gentle, indeed one might almost say a sweet natured side. After lunch, which was served at a small round table in the large dining room, for there had been no one there but the mother and son and their one guest, the girl had been taken up to her ladyship's own sitting room, a very rare favor and one seldom bestowed on even old familiar friends.

After they had talked for a short time over the coming visit of the American Ambassador, Lord John's mother suddenly referred to her married daughter. "I hope, my dear, that you and she will meet soon. I suppose Iris has told you about my poor son who was wounded at the Battle of Ypres? His death will be a merciful release."

And then she showed her visitor all kinds of intimate, in some cases very valuable, objects, connected with the Pendervil family. Among these was a jewel given by Queen Elizabeth as a reward to the ancestor who commanded one of the vessels which had gone forth to do battle with the Spanish armada. This precious jewel was kept in a small safe.

"I had always hoped my eldest son would give that jewel to his wife on their wedding day."

And then the old lady went on, with a break in her voice, "I was so proud of my lovely little son! He was such a handsome child. Quite unlike my poor John; still John was born with finer qualities than his elder brother, Miss Starling. John is a fine natured man."

"I'm sure he is," said Ruth eagerly.

She was no fool, yet she would have been astonished to learn what was the simple truth. This was that Lady Cicester was hoping to bribe her by showing her these treasures of which no money could buy the proud family associations. Now, she had told herself, was the time to get round her—when the girl was still evidently unaware of the strong attraction Lord John felt for her.

Need of Funds.

On the death of the marquis of Cicester immense death duties would have to be paid, and this American heiress could easily fill up the breaches made by those payments in the Pendervil fortune.

"I must rest now," said the old lady at last. "As a rule, I always rest after lunch, but I thought I should like a little talk with you today, my dear. Before I married I came across a very delightful American whose name was Noel Adams and he took quite a fancy to me. Indeed, he said to somebody, who kindly repeated it to me, that I was the prettiest English girl he had met! You can imagine how much that endeared Mr. Adams to me. Ever since then I have liked your country and I have enjoyed meeting Americans."

She waddled with her guest to the door which led into a wide corridor filled with splendid works of art.

How long ago it seemed—yet it was only a fortnight ago—to Ruth, since she had been shown the pictures, tapestries, and fine old furniture among which she now found herself. She no longer felt shy in this old house where she was now so sure of a welcome. So when Lady Cicester called out "John!" and he came hurrying out of what Ruth knew was his own upstairs sitting room, the American girl looked at him with an honest expression of pleasure which astonished his mother.

Could this attractive girl really "like" Lord John? She hadn't a doubt but that should he ask Ruth Starling to become his wife the young actress would unhesitatingly say "Yes." Further, Lady Cicester was convinced that Ruth's theatrical ambitions, should she become Lady John Pendervil, would soon fade away. Of course, Philip Trefane would have to be compensated, but as to that, a thousand pounds would more than meet the case. So as she lay down on her ugly, but very comfortable mid-Victorian bed, she felt happier than she had felt for years. Everything was going far, far better than she could have hoped.

Lord John Meditates.

Meanwhile, Lord John and the subject of his mother's secret hopes spent a peaceful, to her most pleasant, afternoon walking inland and talking of all kinds of subjects excepting that which had first brought them together, the theater.

For a moment at any rate, Ruth's dramatic ambitions lay quiescent; partly, maybe, because, as Iris had said with truth, Philip Trefane seldom discussed their coming campaign with his paying guest and future partner. He had told her, in the course of their conversations in London, that nothing could be done till their return from Cornwall, and during her first fortnight in Perranuth Castle life had become increasingly full of quite other interests to those which had filled her life for over a year.

John Pendervil knew all too well whither he was drifting, and he faced up to the truth of what has been so well said once for all: "Falling in love is the one illogical adventure, the one thing which a man is tempted to think of as supernatural, in our trite and reasonable world." He had fallen in love with Ruth Starling the first hour they had spent together, and he loved her more deeply, more devotedly, every time they met.

Ruth had less than no suspicion of the strong feelings which animated, in their very different ways, the mother and the son. She was pleased, and even touched, that Lady Cicester showed her such kindness and liking, and the knowledge that she was soon to meet the American ambassador at the manor house thrilled her in a way which would have puzzled even her understanding new friend. But to this American girl "his excellency" represented in truth the country of her birth to which she was intensely loyal.

For Lord John she felt warm liking, and a feeling of trust which had banished a somewhat painful sensation of loneliness induced by the growing conviction that the Trefanes valued her for the material benefits she was about to confer on them and very little, if at all, for herself. She rejoiced to have found so good and kindly a comrade to whom she knew she could turn in any passing trouble, sure of honest selfless advice.

In Good Spirits.

On her return from the manor house Ruth found both her host and hostess in high good humor, and quite a little ceremony was made of her introduction to her new quarters in the annex. She was delighted with everything there, and it was true that Iris had worked really hard to make the charmingly furnished bedroom look cozy and comfortable. Unfortunately there were no cupboards, not even room for a narrow wardrobe, so most of what was called by Iris Ruth's "Paris trousseau" had to be left in the castle. But she was in a mood to be pleased with everything. Also she was inwardly relieved that neither the husband nor wife had made even a joking reference to her late return to what was now "home."

The next morning, after a perfect night and a perfect bath, she expressed her very real gratitude to Philip for all the trouble he must have taken. Iris, for a wonder, was late for breakfast, and the two were alone. "By the way, I don't know whether my aunt has tumbled to the fact that the bathroom had to be put in the annex. Did you mention it yesterday?" and he threw her a quick look of sharp inquiry.

"She has never said a word to me about the bathroom. Ought I to have thanked her for letting me have it?"

"Good heavens, no," he answered, with what seemed to her unnecessary energy. "You'd much better let sleeping dogs lie. Let's hope she's forgotten all about it by now."

Ruth had been sleeping in the annex three nights, and she had just come over from the castle and was about to undress, when she heard sounds in the studio-like room beneath. She listened intently; yes, there was certainly someone moving about, though trying to be very quiet, down there. She looked out of one of her two windows at the dark beach below. Whoever it was in the studio did without a light.

There swept over her a slight feeling of fear. After all, though in a sense forming part of the castle, the annex was singularly lonely, for there were no windows on that side of the large medieval stronghold. Then she told herself that now that hiking had become a mania among the young people of Great Britain, a couple of hikers might well have taken refuge on the ground floor, especially as the one door giving access to the annex was never locked in the daytime.

All the same, she felt she must surely discover what kind of intruder had got into the studio.

Taking up one of the lighted candles off the dressing table, she went to the top of the stairs. "Who's there?" she called out. And then again: "Is anyone there?"

Alfonso's Son Seeks to Annul His Marriage

Spain's Ex-Crown Prince to Contest Divorce Sought by Cuban Wife.

New York, July 1 (AP).—Count Alfonso Covadonga, former crown prince of Spain, announced today he would file suit for a New York annulment of his marriage three years ago to the former Edelmira Sampedro, daughter of a wealthy Cuban.

He also announced he would strenuously oppose the divorce action contemplated in Havana by the wife for whom he renounced his rights to the Spanish throne. His father, former King Alfonso, refused to approve the marriage and would never receive the commoner his son married.

Herman Mendes, attorney for the count, said the annulment suit would be filed "in a day or two."

"We suspect that the countess heard of this intended action and therefore sought to anticipate by her announcement of a suit for divorce," Mendes said.

Failure of the countess's efforts to keep her husband in Havana with her family was advanced tonight by Gottfried Schweizer, the count's companion and male nurse for five years, as a reason for the separation actions. He said she was disappointed because the count left Havana last March although a doctor insisted he would have to go to a cooler climate.

The count, in a serious condition a month ago with a swollen knee, "is in very good health now and working every day" for a British automobile firm here, Schweizer said. The count is reported to have a tumor on one leg which could not be relieved by surgery because, being a sufferer from hereditary haemophilia, he might easily bleed to death.

Mexican Soldiers Kill 7, Wound 15

Mexico City, July 1 (U.P.).—Seven persons were killed and 15 wounded tonight at Merida, Yucatan State, when troops posted on the roof of Government House fired on a disorderly demonstration of striking chauffeurs who were insulting local authorities, according to dispatches to the newspaper Universal.

The city was placed under military control after soldiers had dissolved the demonstration.

Woman, 86, Enjoys First Spin in Plane

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Weston, W. Va., July 1.—Mrs. Mary Shouldis, 86, of Sand Fork, today said an airplane beats a horse and buggy "all to pieces."

The aged woman never saw an airplane until two days ago, and that was on her birthday, when she went to Jane Lew to celebrate. As soon as she spied the plane there, she decided to take a ride "in one of those things."

The pilot consented to take her up, and she took a 15-minute spin, enjoying every minute of the soaring, and was ready to go again at any time that the opportunity offered, she said.

"I'm sure glad," she said, "that I got the chance to take one more step with progress and ride in one of those airplanes.

France Retains 2-Year Service Of Conscription

Any Curtailment in Army Tenure 'Out of Question,' Says Daladier.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, July 1.—The French government, bent on keeping its army at top strength in troubled Europe, tonight announced it would retain provisions for two-year conscript service.

Edouard Daladier minister for national defense, told the army committee of the Chamber of Deputies any curtailment in the length of military service was "out of the question."

Early in 1935 the term of conscription was doubled to span the period when Frenchmen born in the World War's lean years were called to the colors.

Daladier, however, said the army would be "democratized." This was taken as an indication he might try to reduce the bridge of class distinction between officers and men, without endangering discipline.

Premier Leon Blum's government, holding a new vote of confidence on its action in suppressing Rightist leagues, faced but minor parliamentary hurdles before the chamber goes on vacation late in July.

However, Bastille Day, the national holiday, July 14, was awaited with anxiety because of the possibility of a Rightist counter-demonstration to Leftist festivities.

Today five members of the dissolved Croix de Feu, acquitted previously of a charge of robbing Socialist headquarters last April 16, were convicted upon government appeal. Two received suspended sentences. The others were fined.

The staff of the Opera Comique, from sopranos to stage hands, occupied the theater 350 strong and made merry on the boards, with police guards as an audience. The performers demanded back pay, better treatment and dismissal of the manager.

Last night's opera performance ended the season.

District Aids Get Warning On Finances

Department Heads Told by Board Not to Incur Deficiencies.

Maj. Donovan, Auditor, Is Completing Work on Fiscal Report.

District department heads were warned yesterday by the Board of Commissioners not to incur deficiencies, as Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, was putting the finishing touches on a fiscal report for the year which ended Tuesday.

Donovan's report, giving a forecast of municipal revenue as well as a report on the present status of District finances, will be submitted to the Commissioners tomorrow for approval.

The letter relative to deficiencies was sent out preparatory to the annual call for departmental estimates for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1937. Although the new fiscal year has just begun, the District heads must thus be prepared within a few weeks to estimate their needs a year ahead.

Cite Concern.

"The Commissioners are very much concerned," the letter stated, "that in the past several years they have been called upon by the heads of certain branches of government of the District to submit to Congress through the Budget Bureau requests for additional or supplemental appropriations to complete the service of those years for which appropriations had already been made in the regular annual appropriation acts for the District.

"In addition, the Commissioners were further called upon to request actual deficiency appropriations, brought about as the result of the failure of certain departents to live within the appropriations made by Congress for their respective services."

The Commissioners pointed out that the antideficiency act is a penal statute and is applicable to all officers and employes of the District government. The penalty for violation is dismissal from office and may include a fine of not less than $100 and imprisonment of not less than a month.

Prevent Additions.

"Heads of departments and other branches of the District government will be required, in submitting their recommendations for the apportionment of appropriations for the fiscal year 1937," the letter added, "in response to the request of the auditor to exercise care to see that the appropriations are apportioned in such manner as to prevent if possible the necessity for any institution or other branch of the District government finding it necessary to request of the Commissioners additional or supplemental appropriations."

Provision is made for the waiving of the act, but only after the department head submits his reasons in writing, appears in person before the Board of Commissioners, and after the auditor has independently investigated the need for supplemental appropriations.

Baker's Drowning Is Called Suicide

A certificate of suicide was issued yesterday in the death of John Henry Edinger, 34-year-old baker, who drowned in the Washington Channel after yelling "this will be a good joke."

Edinger sank in the water at Water and I streets southwest, after telling Paul Caspar, 13, of 922 Sixth street southwest, "to run to my house little boy and tell Mr. Jones I have drowned. This is going to be a good joke."

Paul told police Edinger was standing on the dock when he said this. When he jumped into the water Paul ran to the home of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Jones, at 920 Seventh street Southwest, with whom Edinger lived, telling them of the tragedy.

Edinger came here several weeks ago from Bradbury Heights, Md. He was employed by the Sanico Bakery. His wife was taken to an asylum at Sykesville, Md., a week ago and his 5-year-old son John lives with a grandmother in Hollywood, Md.

Francis Wells Elected Head of Landon Group

Francis Wells, colored member of the Colladay delegation to the Republican National Convention, was named head of a new Landon-Knox campaign unit here yesterday. The group will be known as the Landon-Knox Campaign League.

Wells has been president of the Blaine Invincible Republican Club, one of the oldest Republican clubs with continuous organization. Other officers elected were: J. Franklin Wilson and Mrs. Marie Madre Marshall, vice presidents; Thomas C. R. Bragg, secretary; Miss Dorothy Simmons, assistant secretary; John R. Jackson, assistant secretary; A. J. Gaskins, treasurer, and Dr. John R. Francis, executive committee chairman.

Board Adopts New Zone Rule For Businesses

Principal Bans Are Placed on Auto Repair, Gas Service Shops.

A series of amendments to the District zoning regulations designed to eliminate many of the abuses under the consent provisions was adopted yesterday by the Zoning Commission. The revised rules restrict the kinds of businesses that may be conducted in the first commercial district.

The principal ban is on automobile repair shops, public service garages, and gasoline stations.

The regulations are the outgrowth of two public hearings held by the commission on February 27 and April 22, when no general objection was raised to the abolishing of frontage consents in rezoning property for commercial uses.

Bakeries Involved.

Following are the uses of property in the first commercial zone which are prohibited under the new regulations:

Bakeries employing more than five persons; blacksmiths and horseshoe establishments; bottling works; bowling alleys within 200 feet of residential districts; building material storage yards; carting express, hauling, or storage yards; contractors' plants or storage yards; cooperage; dying and cleaning works employing more than five persons; fuel yard; ice plant or storage house of more than 5 tons capacity; laundry employing more than five persons.

Lumber yard; machine shop; milk distributing station other than retail business conducted on premises; public stable or riding academy; stone yard; storage or balling of scrap, paper, rags, or junk; storage of abandoned motor vehicles, building material, or other debris; undertaking establishments, crematory, or funeral parlor if any property on either side of street is in a residential district; warehouses; manufacturing plants other than printing shops and newspapers.

Repair Shop Provision.

The provision relating to auto repair shops and garages states in part:

"Hereafter no automobile repair shop, public service garage, or gasoline or oil service station shall be established or enlarged in the first commercial district if any portion of any street frontage of the building or premises so to be used shall be opposite a residential district measured at right angles to the intervening street, or if any portion of the building or premises so to be used would be located within 25 feet of a residential district, or if the location of the same is not approved by the District Commissioners.

"Before such location shall be approved the Commissioners shall find (1) that no dangerous or otherwise objectionable traffic conditions may result; (2) that the city plan or the present character or future development of the neighborhood will be adversely affected; (3) that such location is not in such proximity to a school, church, or hospital as to adversely affect the public convenience, interest, or necessity."

31 Boys, Girls Reach Allison Health Camp

Washington Children Are Infected Early by Tuberculosis.

Primed and eager to sip, whiff and sleep their way to health, 31 boys and girls between the ages of 4 and 10 took over Allison Health School for the summer yesterday as the District Tuberculosis Association's children's camp got under way.

Twenty white and 11 colored youngsters comprised the first detachment. Within the next few days the camp will be built up to its maximum capacity, 50 children.

All of the campers are infected in the childhood, or curable, stage of tuberculosis. Plenty of fresh air, pasteurized milk, recreation and rest, combined with expert medical attention, is expected to pay rich dividends in sound lungs, filled-out cheeks and sturdy limbs.

Mrs. Margaret Craig Marsh is superintendent of the 1936 camp, which will be conducted throughout July and August in Allison School and on the grounds, Thirteenth and Allison streets northwest. Christmas Seal funds finance the project.

A chicken dinner, served in the school dining room for the children and several special guests launched the camp program yesterday. Among those present were Dr. A. Barklie Coulter, tuberculosis director of the Health Department; Dr. Joseph A. Murphy, chief medical inspector for the public schools; Drs. Alexander Leonardo and Thomas Mirabile, camp physiicans and members of the Tuberculosis Hospital staff; Mrs. Agnes H. Stewart, occupational therapy director of Tuberculosis Hospital, and Joseph McCreary and Edwin S. Potter, of the Tuberculosis Association.

Woman Changes Accident Story

Las Vegas, N. Mex., July 1 (AP).—Police Chief John Wootton said that Mrs. Helen Sheel, slightly injured in an automobile accident in which William H. Stribling, of Washington, D. C., was killed, told him today she is not the widow of the crash victim.

The woman told authorities last night she was Mrs. Helen Stribling and that her husband was a cousin of Young Stribling, late heavyweight boxer from Georgia.

Mrs. Sheel, in a hospital here, was quoted by Wootton as saying they were en route to Mexico, where Stribling planned to obtain a divorce and then marry her.

Chief Wootton said he had learned Stribling had sold his interests in a taxicab business in Washington and collected his bonus money before departure. He leaves a widow and a child.

Kramer Estate Willed to Widow

Dr. Stephen E. Kramer, for many years first assistant to the superintendent of schools in the District and widely known as an educator, left an estate valued at less than $13,000 it was shown yesterday when his widow, Mrs. Sarah Louise Kramer, filed a petition to probate his will.

The will directed that everything Dr. Kramer possessed should go to his widow without qualification. The estate is made up of about $3,000 in the retirement fund of the public school system and the rest in personal property. Dr. Kramer, who lived at 1215 Holly street northwest, died June 11. He also is survived by a son and three daughters. Attorney James R. Kirkland represented Mrs. Kramer in presenting the petition to the court.

Mrs. Doyle Gets A Second Term As Board Head

Gilligan Also Is Re-elected; 'Scholastic' Is Held Not Communistic.

Beginning a new fiscal year yesterday the Board of Education unanimously elected Mrs. Marion Wade Doyle to a second term as its president.

Her re-election, and also that of Henry Gilligan as vice president, came at the beginning of a morning session in which the board cleared its docket of much of last year's unfinished business, and acted on other matters looking forward to next fall. It was the board's last regular meeting until September.

Three board members, recently reappointed to succeed themselves when their terms expired June 30, began new terms. Two of them, Henry I. Quinn and John H. Wilson, were present. Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, the third appointee, is out of the city.

Mrs. Doyle announced she would reassign all members to the committee positions they have held during the last year, pending approval of members. The appointments will be made formal within ten days.

Transfers Approved.

The board approved several personnel transfers upon the recommendation of Supt. Frank W. Ballou. Mrs. M. R. Merritt, principal of Alice Deal Junior High School, will become principal of Taft Junior High School. Mrs. Merritt steps from the Deal post to enable Miss Bertie Backus, to return to her former position at Deal.

Harry Baker, jr., principal of Taft Junior High School, was transferred to Langley.

The high school magazine, "Scholastic," is not communistic in nature the board decided, acting favorably on a report from a special committee investigating charges against the national weekly. The board, however, deferred action on admitting the periodical to the approved school magazine list.

Meets Early in Summer.

The special committee on vocational education, of which Gilligan is chairman, will probably meet in special session early in the summer to act on Dr. Ballou's proposal for classifiying vocational teachers. The recommendation outlines standards for determining the salary status of the 86 teachers in the five vocational schools. It will set up minimum requirements by which these teachers may qualify for the junior high school salary level.

Dr. Chester W. Holmes, attending his first board meeting as new assistant superintendent in charge of junior high schools, heard the name applied to the study experiment he conducted recently at Anacostia Junior-Senior High School criticized from the floor.

Robert A. Maurer, board member, objected to the name, "No homework."

He said the designation was false and would give parents "the wrong idea." The board agreed that the experiment in the future should be known as a "supervised study" plan.

6,600 Pupils Leave Play For Schools

Summer Vacations Are Interrupted for Special Study.

Lockwood Expects Enrollment to Grow to 10,000 Total.

Sixty-six hundred boys and girls in Washington interrupted their summer vacations yesterday to get back in school.

They were on hand for the first day of summer school in more than a score of buildings throughout the District.

There were 3,791 pupils in the white schools and 2,867 in the colored schools, according to the directors. Both the figures were higher than those for last summer's first-day enrollment.

"And we expect our enrollment to grow every day this week," commented E. J. Lockwood, director of white summer schools. "Many boys and girls who plan to join the classes areaway on vacations with their families. A great number will not be back until after the July Fourth week-end."

1,500 White Pupils.

Another 1,500 pupils in the white schools, and an additional 1,000, at least, in the colored schools is expected to bring the total summer school enrollment in Washington to more than 9,000, and perhaps to 10,000 by next Monday.

Both Lockwood and C. O. Lewis, director of the colored summer classes, pointed out that registrations will be taken at the several schools through next Monday.

There were 1,620 pupils yesterday at Central High School, where all the white senior high school classes are meeting. Junior high enrollments in the white divisions totaled 898 and the elementary, 1,273.

Meet Daily.

In the colored divisions there were 1,002 pupils in senior high school (Dunbar), 501 in junior high school (Garnet-Patterson), and 1,364 in the several elementary schools.

All classes will meet daily from 8:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m. in the elementary and junior high schools, and to 1 o'clock in senior high schools. The six weeks' term continues through August 11.

Missing Girl, 15, Is Reported Seen On Virginia Bus

Information was received here yesterday that Gloria Elaine Carter, 15-year-old daughter of Weldon Carter, musical instructor, who has been missing from her home at 831 Eighteenth street northwest, since June 4, was seen on a bus at Hampton, Va.

A telegram was received by Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, stating a girl answering her description was a passenger from Hampton, Va., to Newport News and then to Leehall, Va. The telegram was signed "W. W. Wilkerson, of Leehall." Wilkerson said he talked with the girl but was unable to get any information from her.

Carter said his daughter had been despondent over the amount of her school work along with extra music lessons.

Gavel of Rotary Changes Hands

Tribute Is Paid Retiring Heads By Rotary Club

Capital Group Lauds Its Old Slate, Welcomes Incoming Chiefs.

Wishing its retiring officers well, and greeting the new, Washington's Rotary Club yesterday changed administrations.

Roland Whitehurst, who has been club president for the last year, turned the gavel over to the Rev. Charles T. Warner, rector of St. Alban's Parish, first clergyman ever elected to the office.

The Rotarians gave their entire luncheon program in the Willard Hotel to farewell speechmaking, to annual reports and to the presentation of gifts to the officers who were leaving their posts.

Gifts of appreciation were presented to Whitehurst, to Edward P. Kimball, secretary of the club for the last year, and to M. K. Wilberding, who has been treasurer for the last four years.

Wilberding earlier in the program had reported "a balanced budget" for the fiscal year that ended June 30. Kimball reported the club, which started the year with 200 members, finished it with the same number. Twelve new men had been enlisted during the year, while 12 had been lost to membership.

"I am grateful for the privilege of having been here," declared Whitehurst in his farewell speech. "I am sure there has been a growth of fellowship during the year, and a development of the friendliness for which the Rotary is noted."

Dr. Chester D. Swope reported the year's activities of the community service committee; James Sharp spoke for the international committee, and William Tufts made the report for the vocational service committee.

Dr. Warner, who will be formally installed in office at next Wednesday's luncheon, promised the members yesterday that he "would do the job."

"It is a great privilege to assume this gavel," he said.

Devices to Test Cars Inspected By City Police

Equipment Would Reduce Defective Autos Here, Says Van Duzer.

An elaborate set of testing devices, designed to uncover mechanical defects in automobiles, was demonstrated yesterday to District police and traffic officials.

Product of an Illinois manufacturing firm, the testing set has been adopted by several cities to promote highway safety and reduce accidents attributed to mechanical imperfections.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer lauded the devices as a "boon to driving safety." He pointed out that few motorists know—or care—what condition their autos are in.

The apparatus tests tire wear, headlights and brakes in three separate operations.

"This apparatus, if adopted for use by Washington, would aid us in ridding the streets of mechanically defective cars," Van Duzer said.

Besides Van Duzer, other officials who watched the demonstration were Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Police Chief Ernest W. Brown and Assistant Traffic Director M. O. Eldridge.

City to Widen Juvenile Aid For Crippled

Aim to Help Children Through Adolescence, Kirby Declares.

An enlarged service for crippled children in the District is planned as a social security undertaking by the Board of Public Welfare, Paul Kirby, acting welfare director, disclosed yesterday.

The activity, which will be financed 50 per cent by the Federal Government, has been approved by the Children's Bureau of the Labor Department and will be instituted this month when approved by the District Commissioners.

A Federal grant of $25,000 through the Social Security Board is anticipated, providing the District is able to match it with similar appropriations. This is expected to be done by citing the expenditures for crippled children at Gallinger and Children's Hospital and the Children's Tuberculosis Sanatorium.

The first job of the welfare department, Kirby said, will be to locate all of the crippled children eligible for the service. The welfare department will then try to co-ordinate existing services, as well as inaugurate new ones, so that the child may be assured of continual care regardless of his need of hospital treatment.

This supplemental aid will include nursing, physiotherapic treatment, school, vocational training and the like.

"Crippled children in the past have been given hospital treatment and then forgotten," Kirby explained. "We want to see to it that they are helped along through adolescence."

July 31 Deadline For Personal Tax

The District tax assessor's office yesterday began accepting personal property tax returns, and Fred D. Allen, the assessor, warned that all returns must be in his office before July 31 if the taxpayer is to avoid a 20 per cent penalty.

Any person residing in the District for three months prior to July 1 is liable to the intangible tax, while owners of tangible personal property are liable to taxes, regardless of the place of residence of the owner, if the property is in the District July 1.

Last year the total personal property tax levy was $5,080,953.25. This year District officials anticipate a large income from this source.

Nats Rout Macks Twice, 13-5, 14-4; Are Point Out of 2d Place

Griffs in Tie With Bosox For Third

Lewis, Chapman, Stone, Kuhel Hit Homers as Nats Get 32 Hits.

DeShong and Newsom Carried to Their 10th Victories.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Philadelphia, July 1.—Into a tie for third place in the American League rode the rampaging Nats on the double quick today as they extracted a pair of victories from their pet prey, the Athletics. But the details of the situation are even more intriguing to Washington fans.

The Nats are, in fact, only a bare percentage point behind second place, formerly occupied by the Red Sox, but now tenanted by the Tigers on the strength of their victory over the White Sox while the backsliding Boston club was taking another licking from the first-place Yankees.

The Red Sox are the co-holders of third place with the Nats who vaulted over the Cleveland club in the standings when the Indians lost to the lowly Browns. Washington's margin over the Indians is a full game as a result of the 13-5 and 14-4 victories here.

Yankees 10½ Games Ahead.

Virtually unchallenged are the league-leading Yankees who are 10½ games in front of the pack. The figures:

New York	48	22	.686	....
Detroit	37	32	.536	10½
WASHINGTON	38	33	.535	10½
Boston	38	33	.535	10½
Cleveland	36	33	.522	11

Those two games here today were a romp for the Nats who flailed away at five Philadelphia pitchers and accumulated 32 hits during the proceedings. By the power of their attack, the Nats lifted both Jimmy DeShong and Buck Newsom into their tenth pitching victories of the season.

Four Homers Help.

Neither DeShong nor Newsom were any great shucks out there on the pitching mound, but the Nats, in making it nine wins over the A's in ten engagements this season, provided 'em with prohibitive leads in both contests.

Contributing to the wreck of the A's were four home runs off the Washington bats. Buddy Lewis set the style when he banged a ball over the fence in the opening inning of the first game, but Joe Kuhel took occasion to slam his homer over the same fence at a time when Lewis and DeShong were on base in the fifth inning of the opener.

Ben Chapman contributed his second home run in a Washington uniform when he crashed a pitch into the leftfield upper deck with Newsom on base in the fourth inning of the second engagement. Johnny Stone broke into the home-run class when he lifted a pitch over the rightfield wall later in the same inning with Lewis on base.

Some pitchers named Harold Ross, Stuart Flythe and Randall Gumpert, opposed the Nats in the Cards' Hurlers Fail as Bucs Win, 9-4

Collect 15 Hits, Cutting Losers' Lead to a Half Game.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, July 1.—Three Cardinal hurlers failed to halt a 15-hit Pirate attack today and the Bucs scored a 9-4 win over St. Louis in the third game of their series.

The defeat cut the Cards' National League lead to a half-game over the idle Chicago Cubs.

Red Lucas, veteran Pittsburgh right-hander, was credited with his seventh consecutive victory of the season, although he weakened in the seventh inning and gave way to Bill Swift.

Managoff Will Wrestle Ernie Dusek Thursday

Ivan Managoff, the Russian Strong Man who impressively disposed of Emil Dusek in his last appearance here, will meet Ernie Dusek in the feature wrestling bout at Griffith Stadium next Thursday night.

No wrestling bouts were scheduled for tonight out of respect to the memory of Mike Romano, who died of a heart attack in a bout with Jack Donovan here last week.

American League Teams Score 106 Runs in 6 Games

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 1.—Pitchers came at a dime-a-dozen in the American League today as the batters wielded the big stick and piled up the amazing total of 10 runs in 6 games.

Twenty-four pitchers faced the firing line, and few had any success, for the hitters had their eye on the ball on all diamonds and smashed out 171 hits.

"The first game of the Cleveland-St. Louis doubleheader was "tops" in both total runs, with 28, and hits, with 38—19 for each side—going all over the lot."

The record for total runs in one league on one day is 101, but that mark, set the by National League back in the '80s, was for four games. There were six games on today's American League bill.

Miss Didrikson Shoots a 75 For Mark

Scorning the use of women's markers, Mildred (Babe) Didrikson unlimbered her heavy artillery yesterday at Congressional Country Club and shot a remarkable 75, three over par, while playing with Helen Dettweiler, host club ace. It was the lowest score ever made by a woman at the course.

That 38-37 was her challenge to Roland Mackenzie, Wiffy Cox and Fred McLeod, the three local professionals who will play in an exhibition match with the Bambino from Texas Sunday at Congressional.

Swatting the ball for rides of 240 and 260 yards, Miss Didrikson collected 13 pars and one birdie.

Tonight at 6:15 Miss Didrikson will be interviewed over Station WJSV by Sports Commentator Arch McDonald on his popular "Peoples Sports Review" program. Miss Didrikson will discuss golf and also the prospects of American women stars in the coming Olympic games.

Browns Win 1st, 16-12; Indians Tie Up 2d

Final Game Called Because of Darkness at End of Ninth, 5-5.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 1.—In almost 5½ hours of baseball this afternoon the Browns won the first game from Cleveland and tied the nightcap, which was called at the end of the ninth because of darkness, 5 to 5.

The wild-hitting opener went to the tail-enders, 16 to 12. The Browns were leading the last game until the ninth, when the Indians knotted the count after two were out on Weatherly's double and Joe Vosmik's single.

A nine-run splurge by the Browns in the sixth inning of the first game featured a free-hitting contest in which nine pitchers tried unsuccessfully to tame the sluggers of both teams.

In all, 68 hits were evenly divided, 19 each in the first game and 14 each in the nightcap. Though hit freely, Earl Caldwell and Mel Harder both went the route in the final game.

Red Sox Bow 5-0, Tied For 3rd

Yanks Leading Race by 10½ Games; Pound Wesley Ferrell.

Ruffing Gives Up Seven Hits; Gehrig Extends Streak.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 1.—The Yankees stretched their American League lead to 10½ games today and knocked the million-dollar Red Sox out of second place with a 5-to-0 victory.

Charley Ruffing blanked the Sox with seven hits in chalking up his seventh straight victory and his tenth of the season for the Yanks' third win in two days over the gold-plated line-up from Boston.

Wes Ferrell was touched for eight hits by the Yanks, one of which was Bill Dickey's fifteenth homer of the season, and another, Lou Gehrig's double, which stretched his consecutive game hitting streak to 11 straight battles.

By losing the clash the Red Sox sank into a tie for third with Washington, as the Tigers passed them with a victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Braddock-Baer Title Bout Sought

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 1.—Ancil Hoffman, manager of Max Baer, stepped into the muddled heavyweight picture today.

By wire he asked Joe Gould, manager of Champion Jimmy Braddock, whether he would be interested in a title match between Braddock and Baer at Dallas, Chicago or some California city in September for a $200,000 guarantee.

Gould said he would hold the offer in abeyance until he saw whether Madison Square Garden and Promoter Mike Jacobs could get together on a title bout between Braddock and Max Schmeling.

The Net Results Are No Better

Detroit pitchers, not so impressive this year, complained that their slump might have been caused by their feet serving as targets for hot grass-toppers during batting practice. Hence this protective net device—but it has done no good.

Tigers Pound Chisox For 25 Hits; Win 21-6

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 1.—The Detroit Tigers gave the White Sox one of the worst beatings of the season today when they lambasted three pitchers for 25 hits to win, 21 to 6.

The Sox made four runs off Tommy Bridges in the first inning, but after his mates pounded Ted Lyons from the box in the second, the Detroit righthander coasted through to his ninth victory of the year.

The Tigers, meanwhile, continued the assault on Red Evans and Italo Chelini in a one-sided ball game. The Tiger attack was led by Gerald Walker, who hammered a home run and three singles.

Perry Beats Don Budge In 4 Sets

Englishman Turns Back American Ace in the Semifinals.

Scores Are 5-7, 6-4, 6-3, 6-4; Von Cramm Gains Finals.

By the Associated Press.

Wimbledon, England, July 1.—Defending Champion Fred Perry and Germany's fair-haired Baron Gottfried von Cramm today gained the final round of the all-England tennis championship for the second straight year.

After dropping the first set, Perry, striving for his third straight title, hauled up his heaviest artillery to blast out a 5—7, 6—4, 6—3, 6—4 victory over America's brightest star, red headed Donald Budge.

Von Cramm's high-kicking service proved the decisive factor in his hard won 8—6, 6—3, 2—6, 6—3 triumph over England's stylish Davis Cup star, H. W. ("Bunny") Austin.

Thus the final on Friday will be a repetition of the 1935 championship round, which saw Perry vanquish the German ace in straight sets, 6—2, 6—4, 6—4.

Perry Is Favorite.

Notwithstanding that Von Cramm has improved since then and holds a victory over Perry in the finals of the 1936 French hard-court tournament, the wing-footed Briton ruled the 3-to-2 favorite tonight.

A crowd estimated at 18,000 cheered itself hoarse during the two thrilling matches. Other thousands struggled unsuccessfully to view the proceedings on the famous center court after paying 3 shillings admission to the grounds.

Those unfortunate thousands missed seeing Budge chase Perry until his feet were covered with blisters. They missed seeing the world's top-ranking star sprawled flat on his face time after time as he pursued the American's lashing backhand shots into the corner.

Perry Comes Back.

But Perry, aroused after the first set and fighting with the fury of a wet hen, made sure they didn't see anything so sensational as would have been his defeat by the California youngster. The black-haired husband of the American motion picture actress, Helen Vinson, still has that little extra when he goes all out.

Budge, while clearly improved over last year when he lost to Von Cramm in the semi-finals, still lacks the sustained brilliance of a champ-

Up from Havana came a glorious idea!

1. In Havana, at a farewell dinner, Nemesio Alvaré, Cuba's genius of rum, said: "I go to get America's help in producing our supreme rum."

2. "Neither Cuba nor America can do it alone," the señor told an old Philadelphia distilling firm. "From Cuba we will bring our knack and our knowledge, and import superfine materials. From you we want American standards of precision in distilling and care in aging."

3. And so came SIBONEY. A rum as rich and fragrant as the gardens of Santiago. But with a surpassing delicacy of flavor that has made cocktail enthusiasts in Park Avenue send up cheers of delight. It's 90 proof instead of 86. And Siboney saves you the import duty!

Rippy Rallies to Take Lead in D. C. Golf

Burrows Is 2d With Total of 143

Titlist Winds Up With 141 for First Round of Tournament.

With a breath-taking rally, which saw him play the last nine with five over threes Claude Rippy, 23-year-old District municipal golf champion, stepped away to a winging start in defense of his title and the captaincy of the Harding Cup team yesterday at East Potomac's course in the first 36 holes of the National Public Links qualifying trials.

Nightfall found the swash buckling boy from North Carolina in possession of a two-stroke lead with a smashing 141, one under par for the B and G courses of the flat municipal layout.

Rippy, with rounds of 72 and 69, topped the fat 225-pound poultry salesman, Ted Burrows, who would have been out in front had not Rippy ripped par to shreds with his great stretch 32 late in the afternoon.

Burrows, who comes out of his hole just like the ground hog for the express purpose of playing in this important municipal tournament, clicked to the tune of 72 and 71 for a 143 total.

With four qualifying berths open, the competition keener than ever before, two other familiar pay-as-you-go golfers followed hot in pursuit of Burrows. They were Pat Axtell, the 6-foot waiter at a barbecue emporium, who scored 73-71—144, and Barney Welsh (not the tennis player), who shot 73-71—144.

The four low scorers will be sent to Farmingdale, Long Island, July 20-25 to compete in the national championships.

Twelve golfers, with scores of 149 or better, are in comfortable positions for today's remaining 36 holes.

Harold Bowers, recent winner of the Rock Creek Open, had 74-71—145. Ray Willett, who was born and bred within a spoon shot of Kenwood's course, was tied with W. W. Seay at 146, while George Malloy, last year's qualifier, who set the pace in the morning round with a sparkling 71, was alone at 147. Virgil Worsham, 16-year-old pal of Willett's, played brilliantly for a 147, and Bobby Burton, former District municipal champion, veteran of many a national championship, shot 149, thanks to a 71 in the afternoon.

They Lead in Battle for Golf Qualifying Berths

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 1.

Bucky Harris is not the one to take joy in other folks' miseries, but he is not exactly sharing the grief of Joe Cronin and Eddie Collins, panicky pooh-bahs of the backsliding Boston Red Sox. Any little thing that his Washington club or the rest of the league can contribute to the sorrows of the Red Sox evokes applause for Harris.

POVICH.

The Nats' manager has no quarrel with Mr. Tom Yawkey, who fired him from the leadership of the Red Sox at the end of the 1934 season. In fact, his relations with Yawkey still constitute a deeply cherished friendship. But Harris is not exactly fond of Cronin, and as far as Eddie Collins is concerned, hate is probably the proper word.

Harris blames Collins for engineering his dismissal by the Red Sox. As Yawkey's general manager of his baseball enterprises, Collins was privileged to second-guess Harris' managerial strategy and, according to Harris, did that little thing to a point where it became extremely irritating to Bucky. In the showdown, Collins remained as Yawkey's No. 1 hand and Harris got the works.

• • • •

Getting fired by the Boston club meant to Harris, among other things, a salary reduction of close to $10,000. The difference between his contract with the Nats and his contract with the Red Sox amounted to almost that figure. Harris' relations with the Washington business office are a deal more pleasant than they were with the business end of the Boston firm, but for $10,000 he was willing to overlook a bit of unfriendliness.

For two years now, Harris has been vindicated. Cronin, who last season piloted the Red Sox into fourth place, did no better than Harris was able to do with a perhaps inferior Boston club the year before. Despite the presence of a $250,000 shortstop in his own person and costly purchases of other talent, Cronin couldn't land the Boston Sox any higher in the race than did Harris the year before.

Now, with the Boston club supposedly fortified by the acquisition of Jimmy Foxx, Eric McNair and Johnny Marcum at an outlay of $350,000 more of Yawkey's money, the Sox find as stallmates in third place none other than the bargain-counter Washington club led by Bucky Harris who wasn't good enough to manage the expensive Red Sox.

The rest of the league, eager to beat the Red Sox and thus soak the rich, has only one thing to fear. Such a notable lack of success as the Boston club has encountered in the past two years may, ultimately, drive Tom Yawkey out of baseball. Surely the man, for all his millions, has a right to be disgusted with the turn of affairs which finds his expensive team now battling three other clubs not for the pennant, but for second, third and fourth place.

Were Yawkey to pull out of big league baseball, it would be an almost tragic turn for the American League. His money has built Boston into a rabid baseball town, despite the failures of the Sox, and has increased league attendance by at least 30 per cent.

All clubs shared in the prosperity at Boston. Where formerly there was only one really profitable city in the East, New York, there are now two. The poorer clubs who weren't drawing at home were able not only to meet expenses but were able to show a profit out of their invasions of New York and Boston. A Boston team up in the race meant much to the league.

Whitehill to Face Mackmen Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Philadelphia, July 1.—With second place beckoning, the Nats will send Earl Whitehill to the mound tomorrow against the Athletics. Connie Mack will pitch the veteran right-hander Gordon Rhodes, in an effort to halt the success of the Nats against the Athletics, whom they have now beaten nine times in ten meetings this season.

Manager Bucky Harris today closed the deal with Mack which brings to the Nats Pitcher Bill Dietrich, bespectacled right-hander. Harris sealed the bargain after a long talk with Dietrich this morning, in which the pitcher expressed the belief that he would be a winning performer with Washington.

Haynes-Williams Bout Postponed to Tonight

first game and pitched 15 hits at the Washington bats. DeShong had a 1-to-0 lead in the first inning, a 5-to-2 advantage at the end of the fourth, and an 8-to-2 edge by the end of the fifth.

Lewis and Kuhel were the prime movers against the A's pitchers in that first game, each collecting three hits. Ross lasted until the end of the seventh by grace of Connie Mack's patience despite the fact the Nats were walloping him for an 11-2 lead. Newsom breezed after getting his big lead in the early innings and he allowed nine hits.

Washington won that second game in the fourth inning at a time when the A's were boasting a 2-1 lead. With one Herman Fink on the mound, the Nats collected eight runs in the fourth. It was done this way:

Stone singled to center. Travis singled to right. Bolton singled to center. Kress singled off Fink's knee. Bluege sacrificed. Newsom was safe on Finney's error. Chapman lifted his home run into the upper deck in left. Lewis beat out a bunt. Kuhel lined to center and Stone got his second hit of the inning—a rollicking home run over the rightfield wall.

That made it 9-2 and nothing was important after that.

Heurich Brewers Win Over Coffey Sales

Heurich Brewers won their second straight game in the second half of the Industrial League yesterday, walloping Coffey Sales, 10 to 6. Taylor, hurling for the Brewers, was touched for 12 hits, but kept them widely scattered.

Huck Stahl, star Heurich shortstop, injured his leg sliding into second in the third inning.

Polly Plum Wins Charles Town Feature, Returns $10 Mutuel

Forthview 2d; Adriatic Is Third

Blonde Baggage Takes Lucky Lefty Purse; Double Is $42.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., July 1.—Polly Plum, a little filly cute enough to be mounted in the Glen Echo merry-go-round, dug her hooves into a muddy, sticky track here this afternoon and arrived at the finish line in front of seven other horses seeking the Greg Johnson Purse, feature race of the day. The daughter of the mud-running Polymelian, which could not win here until her ears were stuffed with cotton, came from behind the pace setters to hold a half-length advantage over Forthview, an English-bred, first-time starter, at the end of the four and one-half furlongs. Adriatic was third.

Postponement, owned by C. E. George, of Washington, probably was the best horse in the race. He was fractious at the post, tossed his jockey and then was started outside the stall gates. When the break came, he went up on his hind legs. From there, Postponement ran an excellent race, finishing fourth.

Jockey Root rode Polly Plum and he did an excellent job. The filly was only lukewarm in the betting and paid a $10.20 mutuel.

The day's secondary feature, dubbed the Lucky Lefty Purse, went to Blonde Baggage. She raced along the rail from the start and held Whiskora safe in a wild driving finish. Princess Wrack went wide all the way and gained third money. The winner was the favorite at $5.20.

Despite threatening skies and intermittent rain, a crowd of some 4,000 was out to witness the sport. Heavy rain last night left the racing strip at its worst. The races, naturally, were run in mediocre time.

The daily double dropped out of the "fortune" class but the lucky ones collected the $42.80 without protest. The winning combination was that of Trylubria, in the second race, and Blind Talk in the third race.

LOVE LOST, steadied along on the outside when outrun to far turn, circled the leaders to wear down TELL IT in the stretch run under good handling. TELL IT, always within striking distance, disposed of AELLA in the early stretch, but could not resist the winner. AELLA, rushed into contention on the outside, tired after running with IDLE WORKER. The latter was kept on the inside in the heaviest going and appeared not to be strongly ridden in the last four furlongs. The others were outrun.

TRYLUBRIA, closest to the early pace of SCOTCH AGE, took command easily going into the far turn, and drew clear while being mildly urged in the closing furlong. SCOTCH AGE, off top, set a fast early pace, could not resist the winner and was tiring rapidly at the end. DARK SUPINET worked her way into contention on the outside and closed gamely. COUNSELLOR BILLY could not keep out. WALTZ KING and the others were never factors.

BLIND TALK went to the front entering the backstretch, was hustled along to the stretch and had to be shaken up to hold DOLLY TOUR safe. The latter, LUCID, gained with a rush in the early stretch, but was taken to the inside in the heaviest going and stumbled. LUCID came with a bold rush at the far turn to enter contention, but hung in the final sixteenth. LUKE PHANTOM gained to the stretch and tired. MISS LULU, away well, was through early.

SCOTTY DON saved ground going into the first turn to take command, was steadied along in the SEA FINN to the far turn and under energetic handling held WITTEKIND safe in the final drive. The latter swung wide going into the first turn, dropped back to last and had to take overland route to reach contention. HARD CHASE went wide at the first turn, moved up menacingly on the outside swinging for the stretch, but flung slightly at the end. ENERGETIC LADY worked her way to the leaders and tired. SEA FINN quit after taking a brief lead.

FIFTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:32. Off at 4:36½. Winner, Mrs. J. S. Navy to Use Middies, Graduates in Crew for Olympic Tryouts

Victor Krulak Coxswain Of Boat

Four Ensigns Will Row; Penn Reported Bolstering Its Crew.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., July 1.—"A" Navy crew, rather than one representing the Naval Academy, will enter the Olympic tryouts at Princeton Saturday, the term being broad enough to cover the Marine Corps, as Victor Krulak, the only coxswain who ever captained an Academy crew, now a lieutenant in the latter service will handle the lines.

Krulak was varsity coxswain in 1932-1933 and 1934, and captain of the crew the last year. He has been assisting Coach Charles Walsh with the crew this year, and the Navy mentor has a high ability of his capacity as skipper of racing crews.

There will be four young officers, ensigns who graduated last month from the Naval Academy, and four midshipmen in the boat as oarsmen. All of the latter are members of the second class.

Walsh said today that he feared Penn, which has been strengthened by Buck, Swift, and Jordan, members of recent Penn crews, more than either Washington or California. The Navy rowing party will leave for Princeton Friday morning, the start having been postponed by two days.

Don Budge Loses At Wimbledon Nets

pion. British experts tonight were saying "maybe he'll come through next year" as they joined Perry in agreement that Budge's backhand is one of the most potent weapons seen here since big Bill Tilden's prime.

"I can't remember when I had to concentrate so hard," said Perry after the match.

The most obvious flaw in the red head's armour against Perry was his inability to resist trying to slip a short one over the net to break up baseline rallies. Perry literally loved that kind. He stormed in like a shot from a cannon and smashed the ball away for keeps. Perry scored 24 points smashing "gift" balls Budge presented him, but he made only nine placements from the back court.

At other periods, notably when he raced through four straight games to win the first set, the Pacific Coast star capitalized to the utmost on the game's greatest backhand and had Perry hanging on the ropes.

Von Cramm Holds Reins.

Budge didn't again look like a winner until the fourth set, when he bewildered Perry again with that backhand and led, 4—2. Perry broke through Budge's serve in the seventh, aided by two successive net-corders. The Briton also scored a service break in the ninth, again benefiting by another net-corder.

Von Cramm, whose consistent length seldom permitted Austin to reach the net, promised to give Perry a run for his money Friday. The Baron looks sounder than last year and his ability against Austin to clip the deep sidelines verged on the phenomenal. He kept the match at a terrific pace in the first two sets, relaxed in the third and then stepped up his attack again in the fourth.

An equally large crowd is expected tomorrow for the semifinals of the women's championship, with Helen Jacobs, four-time American titlist, holding the line against Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, Polish star. Frau Hilda Krahwinkel Sperling, of Germany and Denmark, opposes Mme. Simone Mathieu, of France. The American and German are the favorites.

Jones Pitches No Hit Game, Wins, 20-2

Accounts, Deposits Errors, Hurler's Wildness Prevent Shutout.

Climaxing a series of brilliant mound performances in the Sports Center League, which saw him holding the opposition to seven hits in the last three games, J. Francis Jones, of Accounts and Deposits, yesterday hurled a no-hit game as his mates pounded out a 20-2 victory over Loans and Currency.

But for his own wildness and subpar support by his mates in the first inning, J. Francis might have added no runs to his feat. As it was a walk to Cullen and an error by Seay giving Hallett life, paved the way for the eventual losers' only markers. The walk was the only one issued by Jones, but he atoned for it with 15 strikeouts.

Diamond Trials at Baltimore Start Today

Over 700 Seek Berths on Olympic Squad, to Play Here July 8.

The process of weeding out hundreds of aspiring sandlot baseball players and molding the residue into an Olympic squad, which will appear here against the Quantico Marines next Tuesday, will begin today in Baltimore under the personal supervision of Leslie Mann.

Between 700 and 800 candidates, some of whom were on the grounds as early as Monday, will report for preliminary trials. From them a group of 30 or 40 will be selected to sail with the Olympic party July 15. The squad will be divided into two teams and will play exhibition games at Berlin with a view toward having the sport approved as an official item on future Olympic programs.

Mann, a former major leaguer and now Miami commissioner of athletics, will be assisted by a committee comprised of Harry Wolter, of Stanford; Jackson Hyames, Western State Teachers; Linn Wells, Bowdoin, and George Laing, of the Penn A. C.

The game with the Marines will be played at Griffith Stadium. It is one of a series being arranged for the team. Saturday it will play the Pimlico Club at Baltimore, and Wednesday the Baltimore Police will supply the opposition. The try-outs will be held at Gibbons Field, Mount St. Joseph's College.

Softball Scheduled.

The softball game involving all-star teams which was postponed Tuesday night has been rescheduled for next Wednesday night at Griffith Stadium.

Tests on 'Camera Eye' a Failure, Device Will Be Readjusted

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., July 1.—Attempts late today at Pimlico to put the Waite "photo-finish" device to the acid test met with abject failure. The difficulty was attributed by Charles M. Waite, who developed the machine, and Henry L. Straus, commissioned by the Maryland State Racing Commission to conduct the tests, to faulty installation of the camera.

After repeated failures of the camera to make pictures to within a few feet of the wire, on the wire, and a few feet past it, Waite decided to remain in Baltimore over tomorrow, make necessary adjustments on the camera and then, under Straus' direction, to submit the machine to tests.

The investigation of the Waite camera was ordered by the racing commission, following a ruling against it, made recently by the Massachusetts Racing Commission. It was claimed in the Bay State, where the camera was employed during the early part of the meeting at Suffolk Downs, Boston, that it was favoring the nearest horse in close finishes.

Since this device had been employed during the spring meetings at Pimlico and Havre de Grace, and since these tracks and Bowie had planned to employ it in the fall, the racing commission decided several days ago to subject it to the severest kind of trials in order to determine once and for all whether it is accurate.

Promotion of Lawrence M. ("Biff") Jones, noted football coach, from captain to major was announced today by the War Department.

He gave up coaching football several years ago. He is in the Field Artillery.

He believed this was a Superb Gin

[AND HE WAS RIGHT]

G. F. HEUBLEIN believed that Milshire Dry Gin, as he distilled it, was comparable to any gin made anywhere. This delightfully aromatic gin was first served over the bar at the celebrated Heublein Hotel in Hartford. Here for thirty years it was submitted to the critical judgment of the distinguished and discriminating personalities of America.

Year after year these people praised and enjoyed Milshire. Thus G. F. Heublein was confirmed in his belief that Milshire was a superb gin.

The characteristic flavor and fragrance of Milshire Dry Gin is produced by the unhurried pot-still method of distillation. By the choicest selection of herbs, roots, and berries.

The return of Milshire to the market was something of an event, for is not authentic quality always an event wherever you find it? Won't you try this superlative Milshire the next time you buy?

Wheat Climbs With Canadian Drought Havoc

Price Jumps 3½ Cents in Chicago, 5 Cents in Minneapolis.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 1.—Indications that much of Canada's wheat area is threatening to duplicate the drought havoc in United States spring crop territory whirled all grain values skyward today.

Almost 5 cents a bushel rise was scored by wheat at Minneapolis; wheat in Chicago skyrocketed 3½ cents, and corn, oats and barley here outdid previous high-price records for the season.

Chicago wheat prices closed flurried at almost the day's top level, 3 cents to 3⅜ above yesterday's finish; July, 95¾ to 95⅞; September, 96⅜ to 97; December, 98⅜ to 98½; oats, 1½ to 1⅝ up; September, 32¼ to 32⅜; rye, 2⅛ to 2⅜ higher; September, 65⅝, and barley showing 2¼ cents bulge. In provisions, the outcome was unchanged to a rise of 10 cents.

Motor Shares Lead Market In June Rise

Next in Order Were Rail Equipments, Foods and Utilities.

New York, July 1.—The market value of 100 representative common stocks advanced $574,939,000, or 2.9 per cent, in June, according to the monthly compilation of Frazier Jelke & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange. The total value of $20,427,277,000 was only slightly below the high record of $20,608,620,000 established at the end of February. In the first six months of the year the group of stocks appreciated $2,625,211,000 or 14.7 per cent.

The increase in June, which was the thirteenth advance in the last 14 months, was led by the automotive group and included all divisions except the steels and the building shares. On a monetary as well as on a percentage basis, the motor group scored the sharpest improvement with an appreciation of $255,686,000, or 7.7 per cent.

Next in order of importance came the rail equipments, the foods, the utilities, miscellaneous industries and the chemicals. Smaller gains were recorded in the oils, rails and mines. The steels lost 2.7 per cent and the building stocks 1.8 per cent.

As compared with a year ago, the several groups all show decided improvement except the miscellaneous industrials, the foods and the merchandising stocks; the first named division is slightly lower, while the other two are somewhat higher. The total value of the 100 stocks at the end of June, 1935, stood at $13,996,565,000. The current valuation represents an appreciation of 46 per cent.

Electric Output Sets New All-Time High

New York, July 1 (AP).—Continuing its better-than-seasonal sprint, electric power production in the week ended June 27 moved to another new all-time peak.

The Associated Press index of electricity output, with 1929-30 taken as 100, advanced to 111.2 from 110.5 in the previous week, and 98.9 a year previous.

Actual production, as reported by the Edison Electric Institute, totaled 2,029,639,000 kilowatt hours, an increase of 1.2 per cent over production of 2,005,243,000 in the previous week, which was also a new high, and an increase of 14.5 per cent over the output of 1,772,138,000 in the same week in 1935.

Landis Re-elected Chairman of SEC

Previously he had been a member of the Federal Trade Commission when that agency administered the securities act of 1933.

The commission announced yesterday the filing of 27 additional registration statements. The total involved is $114,117,055.40, of which $111,836,226.38 represents new issues.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent

Wheat's Sharp Rise Fails to Stimulate Stock Prices; Favorable Trade News.

New York, July 1.—Buoyancy in wheat and other grains failed to throw much buying into stocks, which closed irregular on a turnover of around 950,000 shares. Bonds were barely steady. September wheat ended with a rise of 3⅜ cents to 97 cents a bushel.

Stock prices kept largely within the old division limits, about half moving forward a little and the other half declining slightly. Some of the independent steel shares lost 2 to 3 points on a few sales, notably Acme, Allegheny, Crucible and Pittsburgh. U. S. Steel broke below 60 for a good fractional loss. Bethelhem held firm. Tightening of the lines of battle over unionization of the industry seemed to alarm the market, which otherwise would have been in a position to make much of the fact that the operating rate this week is rising steeply.

Public utility shares were mixed, although that section also had the advantage of bullish trade news. Electricity production has risen to a new all time top, but the rate position is less buoyant. Standard Gas issues again were sharply higher. Consolidated Edison rose a point. Rails were steady on small volume. Oils weakened. Standard lost a point. Texas moved forward. Colonial-Beacon was a feature with a climb of more than 3 points at the opening.

Motors Checked.

Motors were somewhat disappointing. Chrysler found the way blocked on profit taking. General Motors backed and filled, waiting for a turn of the tide. Foods, tobaccos, merchants, rubbers and chemicals, with the irregular price changes, also acted as though they were in slack water. Thin markets were found for a handful of stocks, resulting in wide gains and losses on one or two sales.

Samples: Cuban American preferred, down 2½; Mengel preferred, down 2½; Pacific Telephone, off 5¼; Sharon Steel preferred, 3 points lower; Ward Baking preferred, down 2, and U. S. Gypsum, off 1¼ points. American Chain rose 1½ points, Associated Dry Goods first preferred climbed 4 points, Beech Creek was bid up 2⅝ and Duplan Silk preferred hardened 3 points in a seller's market.

Anxiety over the early fate of the gold standard currencies has flattened out. French francs were a trifle easier; sterling was a little firmer, and dealings were small. It would not be surprising if the Bank of France weekly statement, to be issued tomorrow, would show some gain in gold for the week, probably from sales by the British equalization fund. The French government for the moment either has reassured small capitalists in the country or has frightened them into leaving their funds home.

Second Half Statistics.

Most of the large capitalists, it is supposed, long since found a refuge abroad. In any event, the recent run on the franc was as much the result of fright over riots at home as over fear that devaluation was about to take place. A good deal of hoarding of French paper currency took place, which is not the usual procedure for the man who fears his country is about to depreciate the currency.

The second half year begins with a salvo of bullish statistics. Not only is it now established that the rate of trade in first half year was from 10 to 30 per cent ahead of that in the same period of last year, but the momentum promises to carry through the summer—barring a really severe drought or other untoward development. The wheat crop already is largly made, cotton is in fair condition and general crops promise to make agricultural production this year fully as good as that of last year.

Foreign Investments.

Commenting on the Department of Commerce survey of foreign investments in the United States, the New York Federal Reserve Bank notes that there was considerable foreign buying of our securities in the last half of 1935, and that the rise in market value accounted for much of the apparent gain, from $4,270,000,000 in 1934 to $5,035,000,000 at the end of 1935. Classification of holdings shows that French holdings here at the end of last year were only 5.6 per cent of the total, but in the first six months of this year a considerable gain in French funds must have taken place. The combined holdings of the gold bloc countries, which conceivably might repatriate a portion of their invetsments in the event of devaluation, amounted to 29 per cent of total foreign holdings in this country. Simultaneous liquidation of the investments of France, Holland and Switzerland might have a decided effect on our market. Dutch and Swiss holdings of our stocks and bonds are heavy, amounting at the end of 1935 to about $1,000,000,000.

Economic Function.

From a broker's letter: "Any rally which may develop out of early weakness should gather momentum as the week progresses and carry over the holiday. Because of the substantial trading profits which will ensue in that event, we believe the risk involved in trying for them will be worthwhile."

Bank Position.

The first batch of midyear bank statements discloses the expected sharp rise in deposits and cash and a large increase in the Government security portfolios of some of the larger institutioss. By the time all the statements are out it should be revealed that holdings of Government bonds are up about half a billon dollars. Between April 1 and June 24 the figures of New York City member banks indicated a gain of approximately that amount. Probably the increase in Government securities held by the banks, which has been gradual over a long period, is not so important as are the changes that have occurred in the composition of the Government securities portfolio. Unfortunately for those interested in such details, few banks reveal exactly how their portfolio is distributed as between shortand long term obligations. It is no secret that there has been a decided shift into long obligations during the last four months.

Steel Output Tops Average For 15 Years

Six Months' Production 21,800,000 Tons; Outlook Good.

New York, July 1.—"The steel industry enjoyed a relatively good half-year," says Iron Age in its weekly summary. "With daily ingot output in June having been at practically as high a rate as in May, total production of steel in the first six months was about 21,800,000 tons. This was above first half output in eight of the last 15 years and compares with an average six months' production in that period of only 18,890,000 tons.

"The total amounted to 85 per cent of average first-half production in the so-called boom years of 1926 to 1930 exclusive. It was far above the average for the last five depression years and exceeded average first-half output in the 1921-25 period by a comfortable margin. While the trend over the next six months is difficult to forecast, the full year seems certain to be the best since 1930.

"Steel ingot production this week is fractionally higher at 17½ per cent of capacity. The increase is explained by the fact that the Independence Day is an official holiday and some producers are attempting to make up for the loss by heavier schedules early in the week. Output for the week will naturally fall well below the preceding six-day period.

Structural Orders.

"The week's fabricated structural steel lettings amount to 36,800 tons, compared with 16,140 tons in the preceding period. New projects reported call for 38,700 tons, and with 30,500 tons in last week's list, nearly 80,000 tons came out for bids in the last half of June.

"The late season vitality of the automotive industry is a source of astonishment to steel sellers. Not only are orders from the Detroit area well maintained, but increases are reported in some instances. It is evident that production quotas on 1936 models have been stepped up because of heavy consumer purchases, and the Ford Motor Co. has increased its schedule to five days a week in order to build up dealer stocks before changing models.

"The high rate of current industrial activity was further emphasized last week by another rise in the Iron Age capital goods index which advanced one point to 79 per cent of the 1925-27 average. It is estimated that machine tool orders in the first half were more than twice those placed in the corresponding 1935 period, but moderately prompt deliveries are still obtainable."

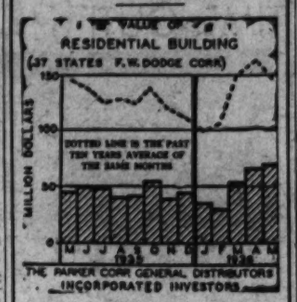
New Home Building At Five-Year Peak



Boston, Mass., July 1.—The value of permits given for residential construction in May passed a year ago by 57 per cent and was the highest month's total since June, 1931. This gain in residential building follows the steady increase in house rents.

E. B. Hall Named Next I. B. A. Head

Chicago, July 1.—Edward B. Hall, president of Harris, Hall & Co., Chicago, has been nominated by the board of governors of the Investment Bankers Association of America to be president of the association for 1936-37, it was announced today by Orrin G. Wood of Estabrook & Co., Boston, president of the association.

E. B. HALL.

The board of governors also named the remainder of the regular ticket to be voted upon at the association's twenty-fifth annual convention at Augusta, Ga., December 2 to 6, 1936. Inasmuch as the official selections of the board have always been approved by the convention, nomination is considered tantamount to election.

Mr. Hall has been in the investment business in Chicago since 1909 when he entered the bond department of the Harris Trust and Savings Bank. He became a vice president of the bank in 1929. Harris, Hall & Co. was formed for the purpose of continuing the corporate bond business conducted by the Harris Trust and Savings Bank prior to the enactment of the banking act of 1933 which excluded commercial banks from that field. A native of Ishpeming, Mich., where he was born in 1886, Hall received his early education in Evanston, Ill., later attending Hill School, Pottstown, Pa., and Yale University, where he was graduated in 1908.

Banking Credit Held Essential To Government

Vital to Economic System, Brookings President Tells Bankers.

New Brunswick, N. J., July 1.—The commercial banking credit system of this country is an absolute essential in facilitating financial operations of government, Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president of the Brookings Institution of Washington, told 400 bank officials here tonight at the Graduate School of Banking conducted under the joint auspices of Rutgers University and the American Bankers Association.

"If the flexibility and expansibility provided by commercial banking credit were eliminated," Dr. Moulton declared, "it is scarcely too much to say that the economic system itself would shortly be destroyed."

Speaking from charts to illustrate his points, Dr. Moulton asserted that "even in normal times commercial banks facilitate the financial operations of governments and in times of emergency they play a role of vital importance. Normally the amount of credit extended by commercial banks to the government is small in amount and for the purpose of merely of financing temporary requirements in anticipation of tax collections or bond sales.

"But in periods of war and acute depression, when the financial requirements of government expand with great rapidity, the expansion of commercial bank credit is on a tremendous scale. Such is, of course, the case at the present time.

"The purchase of Government securities by individuals and by the commercial banks provides the Government with the means by which its manifold activities are financed. Note especially that the Treasury obtains the funds, with which the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and other Government credit agencies finance their operations, through the sale of securities, largely to commercial banks. These funds, in turn, have gone to the assistance of distressed banks and other financial institutions, to aid industrial and agricultural enterprises, to finance new public and private capital construction, and to provide relief to the unemployed."

Differences in Contract Players.

The three classes into which contract players usually are divided—expert, average, and novice—are not accurately descriptive. In the first place, there should be at least six divisions. Even then, there would be considerable difference between the best and the worst player in each group. But that is not the only objection to summary classification. An important feature often is overlooked entirely: that is the type (not the caliber) of the player under discussion.

Let us, for example, compare two experts. Both know the game from A to Z. Their bidding and their play are almost faultless from a purely technical point of view. But one of them inclines so strongly toward conservatism that in every close bidding questions he foists the ultimate decision on his partner and, in the play, he puts safety measures (even when they spell defeat) above opportunism. The other expert, far from sidestepping his responsibilities, plans his bids and his plays to be not only technically sound, but also intelligible to whatever type of partner he happens to have.

Today's hand is a striking illustration of what can happen when one partner "sidesteps responsibility."

West, dealer.

Pass	5 clubs	Double	Pass
Pass	Pass

South's pass to the four spade bid, holding a miserable hand except for one trick that would be certain defensively, but probably worthless otherwise, was a bridge crime of the first magnitude. It goes without saying that he should have doubled. Ever player above the novice class should see the danger created by his pass: that partner, who already had advertised a huge hand, would come into the bidding at the five level. Which is, of course, what happened. North could not be criticized for feeling that a game for his side depended on little more than finding South with four cards to a jack in either hearts or clubs. Four no trump would have been a better "investigating" bid, but the result would have been the same, since North could not have "stood for" the double which would have followed and, therefore, would have run out to five clubs anyway.

The five club contract was slaughtered to the tune of 800 points, declarer having to lose two club tricks, the ace of diamonds, and one heart, besides having his heart king ruffed by one of East's low trumps.

Since East-West would have suffered a 500 point penalt at four spades doubled, on the correct opening lead of the diamond king, South's pusillanimous pass resulted in a "swing" of 1,300 points!

YOU ALL KNOW THE WIND HAS CHANGED AND WE ARE NOW IN THE PATH OF THE FOREST FIRE
WE'VE GOT TO DECIDE WHAT TO DO, SO IT WON'T CATCH US NAPPING!
OUR CAMP IS IN A CLEARING—WON'T THE FIRE GO AROUND US?
TOO MUCH DANGER FROM FALLING TREES, RIMS
WHY NOT CALL THE FOREST PATROL?
I HAVE, AND EVERY AVAILABLE MAN IS FIGHTING THE FIRE—UNSUCCESSFULLY, I MIGHT ADD
THEN LET'S GET THE BOYS OUT OF HERE AND LEAVE CAMP
WE'LL ASK FOR HELP AGAIN TOMORROW—IF WE CAN'T GET IT, WE'LL MOVE

APPLE MARY

By Martha Orr

I'M SO EXCITED OVER ALL THE PRETTY NEW GOODS FOR OUR STORE. I HATE TO LEAVE FOR WORK WITH THE APPLE CART.
DO YOU THINK WE'LL MAKE A LOT OF MONEY, MR. FLICK?
SURE—IF WE CAN KEEP EXPENSES DOWN.

THIS IS HARD WORK, MARY. YOU'D BETTER REST.
I DON'T MIND THE WORK, BUT I MUSTN'T FORGET THAT THE OLD APPLE CART IS MY REAL JOB—
THIS OLD APPLE CART HAS BEEN A LIFESAVER FOR ME, BUT I WOULDN'T BE MAD IF THE STORE MADE SO MUCH MONEY I COULD PUT THE CART IN STORAGE.
